VOL. XX.....NO. 6098. NEW-YORK, FRIDAY, APRIL 7, 1871. PRICE FOUR CENTS.

THE PEOPLE AROUSED.

Monster Meeting at the Cooper Institute Last Evening.

AN IMPOSING DEMONSTRATION.

Political Reforms Loudly Demanded.

The Corruption of Our City Rulers Fully Exposed.

Arraignment of the Legislature and Judiciary.

Emphatic Protest From the Bar and the Pulpit.

Speeches by Hon. Wm. M. Evarts, Rev. Henry Ward Beecher and Rev. Dr. Bellows---Stirring Resolutions Adopted.

The large hall of Cooper Institute was filled to overflowing last evening with an audience composed of the most respectable and influential of our citizens of both political parties, who had assembled to indorse the views expressed by prominent members of the bar and other professions, in relation to the measures now before the Legislature, which are intended to still further engulf the City in debt and the degradation of political corruption. Among the prominent gentlemen on the stage and in the audience were Calvin T. Hulburd, Charles Butler, Henry Chews, James M. Brown, William Tracey, John D. Jones, William H. Aspinwall, J. H. Gaulier, John J. McCandless, Charles Abernethy, R. H. McCurdy, Isaac H. Bailey, Samuel J. Glassey, E. L. Fancher, Henry Nicoll, Henry Grinnell, Ambrose C. Kingsland, Thomas E. Clarke, and others. The meeting was very enthusiastic, and the speeches were frequently and liberally applauded. It was called to order by Hon. Wm. E. Dodge who spoke as follows:

In view of the alarming aspects of public affairs generally, and particularly of the introduction into the Legislature of this State of several measures inimical to the welfare, if not to the existence, of the material and political, and especially the moral and educational interests of this City, the New-York City Council of Political Reform has directed the undersigned, the Executive Committee of the Council, to call a meeting of such of our fellow citizens as are opposed to the measures, to make public protest against them. The most important of the measures referred to are the New-York City Tax bill, Senate bill No. 90, nominally for the establishment of parochial schools, the bill for the abolition of the Board of Education, the bill to repeal the Metropolitan Police law, and the bill for modifying the present Registry law.

Mr. Dodge concluded by nominating the following Executive Committee:

Hon. Geo. C. Barrett,	Robert Hoe,
W. Watson Pasley,	Dexter A. Hawkins,
Hon. W. F. Havemeyer,	S. D. Moulton,
James M. Halsted,	E. B. Wesley,
George F. Putnam,	S. S. Constant,
A. S. Wenman,	C. A. Peabody, D. D.
W. H. Neilson,	Hon. John Wheeler,
Thomas C. Acton,	John Stephenson.
John P. Crosby,

He then nominated for presiding officer Hon. Wm. F. Havemeyer, Ex-Mayor, who in a few remarks thanked the audience for the honor conferred in electing him as their Chairman, expressed his sympathy with the cause which had brought them together, and hoped that the movement would result in great good to the City and those who were engaged in the labor of reform. Mr. John P. Crosby then read the following list of Vice-Presidents and Secretaries:

VICE-PRESIDENTS.

The nominations were unanimously ratified.

Hon. Geo. C. Barrett was then introduced, and previous to the reading of the resolutions said:

That it was his duty, as one of the officers of the Board, to make a brief explanation of its purposes. It was composed alike of Democrats and Republicans, and also men who are allied to no party. Its object, in the meeting was to arouse and rally the public conscience. It might be considered that the denunciation of the people was conceived in sin, and its doom, if evermanifested, will be glazed all over with ink-quiry. The whole atmosphere was corrupt. You look up at its ceilings and find shady decorations; you wonder whence is the great-ness, the wickedness or the corruptness of the place. In this condition the people called for a remedy. Some said let the newspapers help them. A public minority was fighting the great fight. But there was no concert, no combination. People said, Why didn't the Bar help it. There was want of concert there. They applied to the pulpit. Here, again, there was want of concert. They said you must not get us to preach about politics; earthly, we deal only with the hereafter. It came to this: the people must get assistance from themselves. Let them fight the battle. The people found respectable men indorsing a measure which they ought to denounce. When we find three hundred names signed to the certificate, the question was asked: "Do these people denounce it to take away the power of taxation?" He referred to the four men, or rather to the "two men with a single thought two hearts that beat as one." Go to them and ask for your rights, and they will say they are no politicians. He would not be slur on them, but they had done the deed. He spoke about the attempt to do away with the Registry law. The effect of this was, that many one, up to the Saturday night preceding the election, might register, and any citizen might go in and make any statement he pleased. He alluded to the fact that a young man, clerk in his office, ran against a Tammany candidate. He went to look after the clerks. He saw men deposit their votes twice, thought their hearts and boots, and who declared they would vote ad infinitum. When his friend protested the gentleman said, "Young man, this won't do." And he had to keep still. This thing cut both ways, Republican and Democrat were alike open to it. Republican newspapers complained that the Registry law should not be disturbed. We often heard the expression, "Honor among thieves." It was a disgraceful motto. If we could only get to learn that eternal vigilence was the price of liberty, we would get liberty, not otherwise. The combination to think that their rule is absolute, and can't be disturbed. He believed that the day was not far distant when they would fall. He believed there would be such a general uprising as was never known in this country, except when the first gun was fired at Sumter.

THE RESOLUTIONS.

Mr. Henry Nicoll then read the following resolutions:

Resolved, That we regard the bill now before the Legislature for the levying of the annual tax in the City of New-York and appropriating the moneys raised thereby, the bill for depriving the Registry law of its efficiency, and the bills for the establishment of parochial schools, for a change in the law relating to public amusements, and that for a reorganization of the Board of Education, as vicious in principle, and as introducing or promoting schemes dangerous to the perpetuity of our institutions.

Resolved, That the so-called Tax Levy bill, while professing to establish a maximum of tax, really allows those who now control our City Government to increase that maximum almost indefinitely, while at the same time it permits four persons, in the selection of two of whom the people have had no power, and none of whom were selected for any such duties, to appropriate the moneys raised by taxation in such manner as they choose, without giving publicity to their action, and without rendering them liable to any power, thus enabling them to secretly inflict a stab upon our system of public education, and to disburse unlimited sums in the support of sectarian schools and institutions, and for purposes of war with the fundamental principles of our Government, and that the public sense of these measures justly called that it is the real object of the bill to accomplish, in the way, such which the ingenuous intelligence of the people does not detect, to establish openly sectarian.

Resolved, That we will oppose all friends of good government in the Legislature, all supporters of our system of public education, all opponents of sectarianism, to any candidate who will pledge himself to vote against the bill providing for the establishment of parochial schools, the bill providing for the abolition of the Board of Education, the bill to repeal the Metropolitan Police law, and the bill for modifying the present Registry law.

Mr. Dodge concluded by nominating the following Executive Committee:

Hon. Geo. C. Barrett,	Robert Hoe,
W. Watson Pasley,	Dexter A. Hawkins,
Hon. W. F. Havemeyer,	S. D. Moulton,
James M. Halsted,	E. B. Wesley,

A. S. Wenman,	C. A. Peabody, D. D.
W. H. Neilson,	Hon. John Wheeler,

He then nominated for presiding officer Hon. Wm. F. THE RESOLUTIONS.

Mr. Henry Nicoll then read the following resolutions:

Resolved, That we regard the bill now before the Legislature for the levying of the annual tax in the City of New-York and appropriating the moneys raised thereby, the bill for depriving the Registry law of its efficiency, and the bills for the establishment of parochial schools, for a change in the law relating to public amusements, and that for a reorganization of the Board of Education, as vicious in principle, and as introducing or promoting schemes dangerous to the perpetuity of our institutions.

Resolved, That the so-called Tax Levy bill, while professing to establish a maximum of tax, really allows those who now control our City Government to increase that maximum almost indefinitely, while at the same time it permits four persons, in the selection of two of whom the people have had no power, and none of whom were selected for any such duties, to appropriate the moneys raised by taxation in such manner as they choose, without giving publicity to their action, and without rendering them liable to any power, thus enabling them to secretly inflict a stab upon our system of public education, and to disburse unlimited sums in the support of sectarian schools and institutions, and for purposes of war with the fundamental principles of our Government, and that the public sense of these measures justly called that it is the real object of the bill to accomplish, in the way, such which the ingenuous intelligence of the people does not detect, to establish openly sectarian.

Resolved, That we will oppose all friends of good government in the Legislature, all supporters of our system of public education, all opponents of sectarianism, to any candidate who will pledge himself to vote against the bill providing for the establishment of parochial schools, the bill providing for the abolition of the Board of Education, the bill to repeal the Metropolitan Police law, and the bill for modifying the present Registry law.

Resolved, That the measure for rendering nugatory the Registry law can have no other object than the perpetration of fraudulent elections, and the perpetuation of fraud at the ballot box.

Resolved, That from the present and prospective condition of ecclesiastical bodies in this State, great abuses are inseparable from the continuance of State connection with any religious institutions, whether private or political, and that the interests of Church and State alike demand that the Constitution of the State shall be so amended as to prohibit such appropriations.

Resolved, That we appeal to the friends of good government of their inherent duties as citizens of a Republic, and their having the management of political affairs and the control of the Local and State Governments in the hands of idlers and adventurers, and in the total abandonment of a decline in public virtue, and that we call upon all good citizens to make their power felt by uniting to demand from the political parties with which they are accustomed to act, that only candidates for office who are morally and intellectually qualified, and who understand, and will defend, the fundamental principles of our institutions.

Resolved, That, as individual patriotism, however earnest and unanimous, cannot be organized hands through mere party guise, votes upon the organs of government, we regard the Council of Political Reform, which has for its object the union of all friends of good government, and the concentration of the views which entertain upon the national questions which divide parties, as worthy of the approval of all good citizens, and we call upon them to give to it their active co-operation and support.

SPEECH OF WM. M. EVARTS.

The Chairman then introduced Hon. Wm. M. Evarts, who spoke as follows:

FELLOW-CITIZENS: I am quite sure that if the patriotic laborious efforts of the Council of Political Reform now carried on for some years, not only in this City, but in this State, laying the foundations for great and important public action, could be rewarded to-night by no consciousness of their fruit, but this very assemblage itself, it would be to them evidence, to you evidence, to honest men evidence, to knaves evidence, that the people of this City and of this country do take an interest in the substantial welfare of the commonwealth and in the name and fame of American citizenship. [Applause.] For this meeting, so vast in its proportions, so universal in its comprehension of the interests and pursuits of this community, so earnest and honest in its make-up, is brought hither by none of the excitements of politics, by none of the zeal for candidates, or by none of the interest of the honest or more substantial in the results of election. The conjuration which has brought you together, if you prove the conjuration that is to bind you to the warfare, whose weapons you to-night assume, and that is a conjuration as deep and as earnest as that with which the foundations of this Republic were raised, and with which it was saved from the ruin that was threatened it by violence. [Applause.] For of what good is it that we should have brave and heroic ancestors, and that we should have brave and heroic contemporaries on the field of battle, adequate to join hands with the strongest rebellion that the world has ever seen, if then this heroism has secured a perfect triumph our imbecility, our ignorance, our folly surrenders to the shrine of fraud what would not be yielded to the rear of battle? [Applause.] The truth is, gentlemen, that a meeting like this is but a symptom of what occupies the public mind throughout the whole country---the deep, of serious concern about the very institutions upon which our liberty rests. [Applause.] But the working force of this common and equal right without protector, without a guardian, except what each brave heart and each shrewd head shall furnish to each citizen, to wield the powers that free Government had given that head and that strength this scattered and diffused force gathered against powerful combinations stimulated by sordid purposes and confederated to the bond of common infamy. Now, gentlemen, this Council of Political Reform have undertaken to set on foot the sentiments, the movements, and the life which the constitutions by which disorganization, which is the hope, is also the strength of the combined movements of selfishness and fraud, finds its hopes shall cease, and it shall be known that if subterranean links can be made between the knaves of both parties, open and manly combinations can be made by the gentlemen of both parties, and the knaves may be counted on one side and the other. [Applause.] The occasion of this meeting is the pendency of certain measures before the Legislature threatening serious accession to the strength against which we are allied, serious innovations of the common right of citizens; serious interference with the institutions of liberty, civil and religious, in which we have our pride and our safety. And the situation is propitious. We stand indifferent to parties; we are all adherents of one party or the other, but we mean that parties shall confine themselves to their true functions, which is honesty, carefully to maintain the principles on one side and the other for which and through which they maintained and shall administered, the nation has its life; but when either party, especially the party to which we respectively adhere, loses its public virtue and first becomes a faction seeking only the selfish interests of its members, and the---oh, sad misfortune---the unfortunate occasion, for the public life; then our hands, our purses, our votes, are the first to be raised in defence the treason against the common safety. [Applause.] And look how propitious the actual political situation is for the assertion of this principle, the assertion of this power. The Republican party, which in Washington every department of national authority---the Executive, the Congress, the popular vote, the Judiciary---the Democratic Party in this great State of New-York, of which we are all citizens, holds every department of power, Executive, Legislative, Judicial, and in this City every department of local administration. Neither of these parties can say to the citizen within the sphere of its administration that it is embarrassed or impeded or thwarted in its administration of power. Whatever faults we shall find in regard to the Administration at Washington, it is all Republican. Whatever faults we shall find in the administration in New-York City and New-York State, it is all Democratic. And the people of the United States are sound, and I hope it may always be so---watchful of them both. [Applause.] and not from distress necessarily her suspicion, but how the people are aware that great questions of taxation, of revenue, of public expenditure and of public honesty in the servants of the nation and of the State, and in the administration of suffrage, are paramount and principal practical questions in all our affairs. [Applause.] You will observe then also, another great change in this great movement, which we, to-night, publicly inaugurate. It is that new judgment of both parties, it is nothing to boast of in respect of superior strength in the popular will. The elections are closely adjusted. In New-Hampshire the Governor is chosen by the people, and the Legislature, barely carried by the Democracy, is to choose a Governor. In Connecticut no Governor is chosen by the people, and the Legislature, carried by the Republicans, is to choose a Governor. The Congressmen of the Democracy are chosen in New-Hampshire, and of the Republicans in Connecticut, and each party draws off from these divided fields, watching anxiously the strength of the other, to see how, then, some hope that when the issues in the minds of voters on all sides really concern themselves with matters of taxation, of expenditure and of honesty to be had, and when the popular will, holding one as always the balance and always should, the final question of power in its hands, thus seconds aroused, watchful and equally balanced. It is not an auspicious time for honest men to come together and say, "Now we meet as earnestly on the one side and the other as you, but we first for the issues that we avowed, and we will always be confidency, no treason, no surrender or betrayal of the trust." [Applause.] And as in war so in politics. There is but one general way of visiting displeasure. Your guns always point toward the enemy. Your shots cannot be promiscuously diffused. In politics the way that the neutral power, this means to prevent foul play, shows its authority, is by pointing its guns against the party that exhibits the foul play. [Applause.] And these things are perfectly well understood by politicians. A politician is not a man that possesses his soul in patience by any means. [Laughter.] A politician is a man racked by anxieties, conscious that a breath may unmake him as a breath has made him, and the breath of a meeting like this is as easily understood by a politician as a Ward meeting. Now, gentlemen, there is a deep distrust in this country of the good faith of political managers, a feeling that the very institutions which make up the defenses as well as the stories of liberty are in danger, because a people, the best-instructed, the most vigorous, and I think, the most patriotic and the most intelligently patriotic, that the world never saw, by the very confidence in its institutions, has realized that present and continuing practical virtue without which no valuable possession, however nobly transmitted, can be secured and enjoyed. Why, gentlemen, we really seem to have thought that the wisdom of the fathers of our institution had set in going a machine in government that had the virtue of perpetual motion, and that it was not limited to an establishment of the organism of liberty which brave hearts and honest heads could wield for the preservation of their country, of themselves, and of all their interests, and which slaves and knaves could trample in the mire and destroy. [Applause.] Why, gentlemen, the freedom which built up liberty. [Applause.] and we must not over that nation. And then there has always been another difficulty. When these threats were made against the institutions, and against the Government and its administration, we must look around to see where the protectors were. Cromwell was named Lord Protector of the liberties of England, [applause,] and he ably discharged that duty. [Applause.] But who is named Lord Protector of the liberties of America? [A voice---Andrew Johnson.] Not persons that are named, its sovereigns---the people. [Applause.] And you can surrender this liberty whenever you please. You can have it stolen from you whenever you do not resist the thief. You can have it murdered before your eyes, when you can straightway to intercept the assassin [applause,] and I would like to know when will be the weeping for them then? You have had everything that the human race in its progress up to now could give to help and maintain freedom. You have education as free as the air. You have freedom of conscience; you have a free press; you have the right of free assembly, the right to bear arms; you have the right of free and equal suffrage, and you have all the principles of justice, equality and of contentment that grow out of the question, diffusion of right, and if the end of the whole of it is this, that the only combination that you are capable of when the wolves of fraud attack you, that sole combination when the sheep have ever been known to exhibit---that is following the first that can wave---who will have you? [Laughter.] Who will help you? [Applause.] But now it is very easy to see who will fight for our rights. A man who won't fight for his rights I do not believe much in his fighting. [Applause.] It is all very fine; he has always been ready to do something else than the thing that is now upon the table; and just so long as these marauders of our position and the virtues of our characters find out that we are always ready to do something else than the very thing we need to do, you may rely upon it they will not be disturbed at all. The moral of it all, gentlemen, is, that our liberties are all in our own hands. There is not a dungeon, or a thumbscrew, or a file of soldiers, or a tyrant of any kind that threatens the power of the life of the liberty of anybody. All they ask of you is that you will be gagged, and lie still while they pick your pockets. [Laughter and applause.] And if you resist and make a noise and a fracas, and break the peace, why who could complain if they break your heads for doing so? [Laughter.] Now, gentlemen, that is precisely the situation of affairs as they are. It is no longer a matter of pride to be a New-Yorker; it is a matter of deep disgrace to be a New-Yorker, if New-Yorkers cannot save themselves from the infamy in which they are now submerged. [Great applause.] And there are a great many people that think so, among which number I include all who are now in this room. [Renewed applause.] Well, now, you have assembled, and there are a great many people outside of this building that are of the same opinion. There are always four people to one that will have the same way of thinking, that stay away from the meeting, to those that come. The first quarter are those that do not come, because they don't think there will be anybody there. [Laughter.] The next quarter stay away because the room will be so full that they cannot get in. [Continued laughter.] The third quarter stay at home because they can read it all in the newspapers the next morning, and the next quarter stay away because they think it would not do any good if they would come, and as far as they are concerned it is probably so. [Renewed laughter and great applause.] Now, what are the great institutions upon which our liberty rests? The separation of Church and State, freedom of instruction, purity of administration of justice, and the suffrage. Now, I am interested in these particularly, I would like to know? Is it the rich man? Why the rich men are those that come on pretty well, as is shown by the fact of their being rich under any form of government, [laughter,] except that of the next world, perhaps. [Renewed laughter and applause.] I never heard there was any trouble about the rich men, under an empire, under a monarchy, under a tyranny, under an Indian, an East Indian, mere government of nabobs and satraps. I never heard there was any trouble about the rich men among those forms of government. The trouble was with the poor; they kept growing poorer, while the rich grew richer. Did you ever see before this present exhibition in America, the rich men contributing to their own growing poorer every day, and the tax-gatherers taxing their riches in their eyes? [Applause.] And yet these people understand, and let us understand, that all this people are made up of human beings in whom the principles of human nature have their sway, and the whole political security of this country lodged in the many, and yet we have gone on under our institutions with perfect safety, and without discord between the rich and the poor. Why? Because justice and law presided over them all. [Applause.] And the rich man's fortune marked his enterprise, his energy, his thrift, his frugality, perhaps his good fortune; and the poor man's poverty marked his sloth, his dishonest labor gave him justice and equality, and schools for his children, and a vote at the polls, and it was the best country for him that the world ever saw. [Cries of hear! hear! and applause.] And all these rich men that I see were sons of poor men, and he had that promise then for his children, that the poverty of the father was enough. But let me tell you, gentlemen, that you are going to introduce the inequalities of life, made by the taxation of the poor, to make up the fortunes of the rich by fraud and force, the principle of justice no longer keeps the peace between these classes of society. [Great applause.] Why, gentlemen, we ought to be able to understand that, after 1776, when men came together and gave each other faith and their hands, and their lives, and their fortunes, and their sacred honor, to establish the principles of liberty, in their future faith. But knaves like these can never keep their word. Their promises may be as magnificent as inspectors, if you desire inspectors of election. Mr. Burke says hypocrisy can afford to be magnificent in its promises, for never intending to give what it promises it costs nothing. [Laughter.] Now we have a Declaration of Rights which is to be erected by the people, as the matter now stands, but it is all turned over to the Mayor, and we have a system of parochial schools which is intended to introduce clerical education for the common people without cost, instead of secular education, upon which the foundations of civil and religious liberty in this State and this country rest. I will occupy none of your attention with any discussion of these measures. You may throw away the independence of State separated from the Church, you may throw away the equality of education for the children of all, but we who think otherwise in this meeting and in this community intend to protest against it and to vote hereafter against anybody in the Legislature that votes for it. [Great applause.] Now, gentlemen, I will come to a conclusion. There is trouble about organization. In the first place many very good citizens, it is said, think we are malcontents, and I suppose, enemies of civil and religious liberty, in meeting here to-night. I am certain that nobody feels greater respect for Peter Cooper than I. This very hall is a monument to his public spirit, his honesty, his worth, his virtue. [Applause.] But I am afraid that in his confidence some men in a small thing may be as good as he is; he is a little visionary. [A voice---"Louder."] A little visionary, I said. [Applause and laughter.] Gentlemen, we are not afraid of anybody unless they are in ambush. Then we are afraid of them. We are afraid of Republican canvassers that count Democratic votes. [Applause.] We are afraid of Tammany Democrats and Tammany Republicans. [Applause.] We are not afraid of honest Democrats, whether young or old. And we are not afraid of honest Republicans, whether or no they have this or that opinion on any other questions. With manhood untouched and every institution of liberty at our command, we will sound the bugle for the battle, and will leave the field carrying our shields or borne upon them. [Great applause.]

SPEECH OF HENRY WARD BEECHER.

Mr. Beecher, who was received with much applause, said: Fellow-citizens, I am not without interest in the points which have been made, and in the whole breadth of that matter of reform which has brought you together to-night; but my special interest, and that to which I shall confine my remarks, is the bearing that this Two Per cent Tax bill has upon the subject of common schools in the City of New-York. The whole money is put into the hands of four men, to be distributed in certain designated sums to be provided for according to their best judgments in the different departments. [Laughter.] We cannot doubt that so important a trust as this has been put into the hands of honest and honorable men. [Great laughter.] Both courtesy and experience requires us to say so much. [Continued laughter.] If there is any error in the distribution of these moneys, charity requires us to suppose that it will be an error---[laughter]---and it is to point out, therefore, in advance, some of the mistakes to which honest and honorable men may be liable that I shall speak. For I hold that there is no such thing as a democratic republican Government without intelligence, and that one of the first duties of every Republican community is to provide for the education of its future voters. It is not only the duty of the State that shall be effected, but I hold it to be one of its most solemn duties to prepare its population as fast as they come to prepare it to exercise its functions as the judge of judges, as the maker of legislators, and through the legislators all the makers of the laws, and as though its officers, the supreme administrators of all public trust---these great duties which devolve upon communities cannot be executed by the whole people unless they are intelligent. The fourth men are blind men. Educated men are men that have been taught through their eyes to some purpose, and although we cannot undertake to deny that men are better educated in colleges and universities, cannot make learning a common property, but we can make intelligence common property, and it is upon that intelligence that all our Governments like ours must rest for their safety. [Applause.] I should not feel that the school system of New-York was in any danger from the method which this bill embraces. You will recollect, for it is a matter of notoriety, that hitherto, by virtue of a certain enactment which had been made, large moneys had been distributed to sectarian schools---hundreds and hundreds and thousands of dollars. I am not here to complain that this distribution there was the grossest inequality. I am not here to say that it ought not to be awarded, so that hundreds of thousands of dollars should be given to the Roman Catholics, when only tens and fifteens of thousands were given to the Protestants. I wish there had not been a dollar given to the Protestants. [Applause.] More than that, it is right to give, if that is the proper policy, them! I hold that the Roman Catholic schools ought to have more than Protestant schools; they need more. [Laughter.] This I don't say as a bit. I say that a vast part of our population, and probably the vast majority of the adherents of this great sect in religion, are foreigners. They come here with little capital except their hard hands and their brains, though some of them are shortly after signally placed by Providence in a position of wealth, if they are in the right connection. [Laughter.] I hold that this great population in our midst need more except than others; and if it is right to use public funds for sectarian schools, I should not object to their having the larger share. There is a certain equity in it; but I object to the use of public funds for sectarian schools altogether. [Applause.] I object to it because, in the first place, it is almost impossible to make any equitable distribution among so many sects as we have; because, in the nature of things, the largest and strongest denomination will eat up substantially the little ones. Therefore, they that have need of the least will have the most, and they will have least who need it most, like in animal creation the huge parent lies on her side, and the pigs and piglings are getting their respective teats, there will be knocked over on their backs the weak and delicate, and those that require most milk. It will be the same thing over again; the rich and the strong will get the milk, and the poor and the weak will get none. [Applause.] Yet though the strong need culture not half so much as the weak, the most beneficent policy in any community is one which takes care of those least able to take care of themselves, for that which takes care of the poor and weak and helpless, that policy will also take care of the fortunate and prosperous. If you lift up the foundations of a house every thing goes up with it clear to the roof, but you can lift up the roof without making the basements or cellar better or cleaner. Take care of the bottom, and the poor and weak parts and the rest will be taken care of by the very agencies of such a policy as that. I hold that any distribution which by any statute or by rule or by law care of them. [Laughter.] I plead, then, for the common people's sake, from among whom I sprung, and to whom I have always belonged, as with the warmest sympathies. I say as distinguished from the great sectarian or religious part of the community, I plead for the common public schools, without sectarian schools, for the sake of the great mass of the community that most need schools and least can furnish them themselves, and will be most cheated when the public funds are distributed by any sectarian rule. [Applause.] There are a great many other considerations. I hold there is nothing more important in a democratic-republican community than getting the circulation of money and press. You will always have classes, but you must not have classes harden into permanence. Freedom requires that I must have every opportunity to be just as tall as I can grow. Freedom requires that I must swing my arm as I like, and I must develop all the legitimate faculties that God has given me, and then if there is a man that is weaker than I, I am above him. That is democratic. Freedom requires that every individual man should have the right to use all the energies God gave him as he thinks fit, provided he directs them in a proper channel, and violates no human or divine laws. That is democratic. It does not mean that everybody is left to mope and drop about in the dirt together. It means taking the poor boy by the hand and letting him go up as high as his talents will admit. Let every man stand in that point, and I hold this will classify society, and its very tendencies are to keep these classes together. They all form and dissolve in every generation. Those that are able rise to the top and become the natural leaders, and those that are not able sink to their proper level at the bottom. No man has a right to undertake to get his boy to a position which he can't maintain. If his boy wants to grow up to that he is justified in the purpose, but his father has no right to keep him in that class, and to make a conventional or privileged class in a community where there is no reason that there should be perfect ease, so that those at the bottom who have got anything in them shall rise easily and naturally, without any obstruction, and those at the top shall sink easily and naturally to the bottom. [Applause.] Free circulation! The common school is one of those great engines by which the common feeling of the community, this brotherhood feeling, is to be maintained. For while we hold that every man has a right to shoot up and go as high as he pleases, without embarrassment, provided he goes honestly, we hold, on the other hand, that it is good and wholesome that his children should go to the bottom again and commence where he started; and not only should he do that, but they should feel that their only friends are not merely those that are their brothers as well. We want to get up a feeling of manhood and brotherhood, up and down, from side to side, throughout the whole community. I would make your public schools so that every man's son---lawyer's, doctor's, or minister's---shall have to sit down side by side with the blacksmith's son, and the laborer's son, with the coal-heaver's son. Your boys, old gentleman with the gold-rimmed spectacles yonder, are not a bit better, and might sit side by side with your washerwoman's boy. [applause,] and it is humanizing, and prepares them for good citizenship. It is best for your boys that they should not get any notions into their heads; it is best for the children of the rich men to associate with children of the poor, to know that they are all bone of one bone and flesh of one flesh, and a generation of voters which have been educated in the common schools are not likely to foment discords, and seek relief for injury, real or supposed, at the end of the bayonet. [Applause.] Whole population through these common schools, and you will go far to promote a common weal, and that is what we specially need; a feeling of brotherhood, of citizenship, and of common humanity. Now in order to this you must make your common schools so that no other school can live in the neighborhood. If you please, if you make your common school so good in its instructions, so perfect in its whole apparatus, so wise that no private enterprise can equal it, then perforce you will draw the children of the rich and properous. This is what I especially want. I should be very sorry to see a community like a dairy where the cream is taken off and separated from the milk; I don't believe in any such manner of dealing with a community. On the contrary I wish to see a community in which we are trying this sublime experiment of self-government. I wish to see this community while there is absolute liberty to use their educated forces, it shall only carry them out of the love of power, party and the sectarianism of the common citizenship among the poorest and the most needy in the entire community. If you destroy your common schools, it will be done under the direction of sectarianism, and the moment you do so the Roman Catholic children of the City of New-York are expected to go to their schools, the High Church Episcopal children are expected to go to their parochial schools, and next all the rigidly Calvinistic children are expected to go to their schools. The maintenance of these sectarian schools has a tendency to undermine the common schools, and where will the residue of the population receive their education? I protest against it. You pay sectarian schools a large price for destroying the common schools under their sectarian influences. You will ask me how will this be done? Well, let by-gones be by-gones. It has been done, and with the greatest partiality, I do not need to inform you, for you all know it. Well, I throw out these thoughts, for after these your honorable and honest gentlemen who receive all the money into their hands, after paying the necessary interest on bonds and debts and coming to distribution, there will be a distribution for party funds and sectarian schools---they might be tempted to it. It was done before, and would constitute the most important vote in the State, and there is nothing to prevent them from making a dip in the Roman Catholic direction---[applause]---not that I object to Roman Catholics; I have not one particle of the enmity to them that they have to me, [laughter and applause]---but that I do object to anybody in the public funds. Mr. Kennedy, as you know, introduced a resolution enjoining that they should not appropriate the public moneys to sectarian school systems or institutions, or anything under the care of one single denomination, and it was voted down without a dissenting vote. [There's no."]---they threw it out boldly and unanimously. The Commissioners mean to have done with declaration of all the funds; men feared that the common school system would be weakened in New-York, and they asked them to give a test of their sincerity, and they absolutely refused to bind themselves. I take that as a confession that they will use it this way; and in time to come, act as in times that are past, and you will have $500,000 and $600,000 taken out of the public funds for the schools of St. Charles Borromeo and St. Joseph, and all the other names who have large schools in this City. For myself, I will wall to every effort for the promotion of education, but I protest in the name of the people, protest in the name of the voting poor people, and in the name of our common Democratic brotherhood against the use of the State funds to build up sectarian schools at the expense of the common school system of the City of New-York. [Applause.] I appeal to every working man in the City; I appeal to those who know the struggles by which the poor widow rears a large household, and to every widowed mother laboring honestly for her boys whose only absence she knows is the knowledge to be obtained in the common schools of the City; I appeal to every German who does not believe in any particular religious faith, but would have his children educated, and our future voters; I appeal to the great mass of the working people of New-York, against either clandestine or open and avowed perversion of the public funds for building up sectarian schools in New-York. [Cheers.] I give distinct warning on this is a matter that shall not rest. It touches morality, and it touches patriotism to the very quick. [Cheers.] It is not one of those transient party questions which rise and fall almost as the waves of the sea; there are men who so firmly believe in the welfare of the community, and that it is indissolubly bound up with the intelligence of the people that no effort that shall be made, secretly or openly, to weaken our common school system, shall be suffered to go on long without rebuke. [Applause.] I tell those that may be interested that while they may be able to carry heavy burdens, and carry that as our last measure, I do not believe they are going to be able to bend their backs to this odious measure, and carry it, except at the price of their own existence, and that of the party to which they belong. [Cheers.] I will not detain you discussing the objections to the public schools as distinguished from sectarian schools, but when they say the public schools are infidel because they are not sectarian, and that they cannot teach morality because they do not teach sectarian religion, and that it is the duty of those who believe in religion to provide separate schools where religion may be taught, the objection is founded on a fallacy. We do not teach dogmatic religion in the common schools, and we ought not; and I may observe that if there was less of it taught in the church it would be all the better. [Laughter and cheers.] We do not teach discrimination of creeds, or catechisms, or systems of theology in the common schools, but if there are those that believe in systems of dogma or ecclesiastical usage, what is the family for, what is the Church for, what is the lecturership for? Those children are not to be untaught in religion because it is not taught at the common schools. [Applause.] We don't teach trades in the common schools, but that does not hinder them from being taught elsewhere. It is the same with professional knowledge. We do not teach it in the common schools, but it is acquired elsewhere. The common schools inspire intelligence; they teach the children so that, having eyes, they see, and having ears, they hear, and having intelligence, they understand, and having given them the ground work of intelligence, leave to the priest or the father and mother, who are often the best priests, the work of instilling special religious know

PERSONAL, POLITICAL, AND GENERAL.

Dr. C. H. F. PETERS has returned to the Litchfield Observatory from Europe, and is on the look-out for more asteroids.

The Hartford Post speaks with justifiable pride of the completeness of its returns of the vote in Connecticut on Monday. No paper in the State showed more enterprise.

Mr. GEO. W. TIFFT, of Buffalo, has given a new brick building on Seneca-street, in that city, to the Ingleside Home for Erring Women. The property is valued at $60,000.

A Canadian paper is the authority for the statement that Prof. GOLDWIN SMITH says that the colleges in the United States compare unfavorably with those in Canada.

The trustees of Washington and Lee College have bought the Executive House in Lexington, Va., to convert it into a dormitory for the students.

Virginians boast that the present condition and the prospects of their State are better than those of any other State within the limits of the late Southern Confederacy.

An employe in an ale-bottling establishment in Boston, on Tuesday, on a wager, wired twenty-five dozen bottles in forty-nine minutes. The wager was that he could not do it within an hour.

The result in Connecticut, the SYRACUSE Journal says, will tend to bring Gen. JOSEPH R. HAWLEY prominently before the country as a candidate for nomination to the Vice-Presidency next year.

The Charleston Chamber of Commerce has called a Convention of delegates from every county in South Carolina, in Columbia, on Tuesday, May 9, to consider the financial condition of the State.

Connecticut papers say their House of Representatives will consist of 130 Republicans and 108 Democrats. One of the members is classed as a "Temperance Democrat." The Senate will stand thirteen Republicans to eight Democrats.

Judge H. H. LEAVITT, who has just resigned his office as Judge of the United States District Court for Southern Ohio, was commissioned by President JACKSON on the 30th of June, 1834. He will be seventy-five years old on the 18th of June next.

Mrs. HANNAH COOLIDGE, late of Waltham, Mass., left $4,000 for a parsonage for the Congregational minister in that town, $1,000 for the poor, $1,000 to the American Bible Society, $1,000 to the American and Foreign Christian Union, and $2,000 to the Home Missionary Society.

In the First Congressional District of Connecticut the Republicans have 274 majority; in the Second, 49 majority; in the Third, 1,483. The Democrats have 1,131 majority in the Fourth District. Thus, on the vote for Congressmen, the Republicans have a clear majority of 605 in the State.

A writer in the Charleston News advises a direct appeal to Congress, asking the National Government to take charge of the administration of State affairs in South Carolina. He says that the people have no hostility whatever to the United States Government, and that they have not resorted to Kukluxism from love of it, or from choice.

When the rebellion began, says the Boston Traveller, it was urged that it was unconstitutional to suppress it, as it was the States that had rebelled, and there was no authority in the power of Government to restrain the States; in the new insurrection, it is lawless gangs of people who defy the law, and now we are told, on pretty much the same authority, that the General Government has no authority to interfere with individuals.

The Columbia (S. C.) Union asserts that the late "movement" of the Chamber of Commerce and the Board of Trade of Charleston, was solely for the purpose of "bearing" South Carolina bonds to save persons who had "sold short." It says: "The whole movement is becoming as transparent as daylight. It is speculation by the originators, and repudiation by the rank and file of its supporters."

Alluding to the suggestion that Hon. BEN. F. WADE be made the Republican candidate for Governor of Ohio, the Cincinnati Gazette says: "With such a leader we might expect a vigorous canvass, a full vote and a sweeping victory." The Cincinnati Chronicle says that Gen. GARFIELD offered to withdraw last Fall in favor of Mr. WADE if he would accept the nomination for Congress, but he refused, and it thinks that he will not this year be nominated for Governor if it is necessary first to obtain his consent.

Memphis was excited on Friday afternoon last by the arrest of one of the men supposed to be FORRESTER, the murderer of Mr. NATHAN. He was captured at the depot, while about to take the train for Louisville, and was conveyed to the jail and detained there until 2 o'clock in the afternoon, when he was brought before Justice F. M. WINTERS for identification. When arrested he gave his name as J. W. CUMMINGS, alias Dave CUMMINGS. He was confronted with a number of detectives and other persons who knew both FORRESTER and CUMMINGS, and they instantly said that he was the person he claimed to be, and was not FORRESTER, as suspected. Describing these circumstances, the Avalanche says that the identical FORRESTER was in that city a few weeks ago, and was stopped by one of the detectives, to whom he said that he was passing through the city, and was not intending to do any "work." Not knowing that he was wanted for anything particularly, the officer allowed him to go on his way.

The Baltimore American expresses the belief that, upon a free and fair election, in which every citizen legally qualified is allowed to deposit his vote without coercion or hindrance, the Republican Party would carry the State of Maryland. In the last election, it says, not less than 5,000 white Republican voters were bullied and cajoled into voting the Democratic ticket against their own convictions and their own better judgment, and an equal number of colored voters were kept from the polls through intimidation and fear of being discharged from employment. At the municipal elections this Spring there has been no excitement, and consequently no intimidation of voters. Some weeks since, at the elections for municipal officers in Frederick, Boonsboro and Williamsport, the Republican candidates were elected by decisive majorities. On Monday last elections were held at Annapolis, Frostburg and Towsontown, which resulted favorably to the Republicans. The triumph at Annapolis will secure the Republicans of Anne Arundel representation in the next Legislature and if harmony and good counsel prevail, they will elect their county ticket.

The New Post-Office—What Has Been Done and How the Work Goes On.

The trowel-clink and the squeaking of the derrick are once more heard in the new Post-office inclosure, and the crowds gaze through the re-opened gates upon the work with a renewed expectation that it may some day be completed. Since the 4th of March, when the long-sought-for appropriation was granted, amounting to $1,898,000, things inside the high fence have been looking up rapidly. The force of men has been increased to 200, and the place is alive with the activities of muscle and steam. The granite is rapidly coming in from the quarries, all cut and numbered, ready for fitting into its place, and a large force of bricklayers is at work. The Ætna Iron-works have nearly fulfilled their contract for the iron of the basement and sub-basement, and Messrs. WILLIAM L. MILLER, DE FREE & Co., of Brooklyn, will commence within a month to put in the wrought and cast iron-work of the first story, which they have contracted to furnish for $165,447 04.

It may be inferred from this that the massive frame-work of the basement and sub-basement is completed, and the main part of the work finished up to the surface level. The work of iron floor-beams is all in place, and loose planks are laid, on which stand engineers to work the derricks, and over which hod-men and men with wheelbarrows rush perilously in all directions.

Descending to the basement floor, the immensity of the structure is still more evident. Half a dozen completed buildings are erected in different parts of the area, with forges, &c., in full swing within, and the number of caverns of brick and granite into which the spectator finds himself constantly straying is positively bewildering. Underneath him in many places is the sub-basement, running to a depth of thirty-five feet below the surface. It is now asserted by those interested and informed, that the Post-office, barring the "despot onsartainties" attending the indispensable appropriations of Congress, will be finished in five years.

NOTES FROM THE PEOPLE.

A Letter of Inquiry.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I am a quiet Republican, residing in the Eleventh Assembly District, and a member of the Republican Association. I have always voted for the officers, and paid my little contribution to the expenses. Your disclosure as to the condition of the roll are certainly surprising, but I have been disposed to consider that such a state of things might have come about honestly. But in your article on Monday you make a statement which I did not believe. I have since looked daily to see an indignant denial from the parties whom you designate. If I knew them personally, I should call their attention to the matter, for if your statement is true, I want to confess myself badly humbugged, and to get out of bad company. You say, in substance, that it is reported that the counsel to the Tax Commissioners received a salary of $10,000 a year, of which he keeps only $2,500, and pays over $8,500 apiece to the acting President, the Chairman of the Executive Committee, and a prominent member of our Republican Association. Now, JOHN V. GERDES is the acting President, and JAMES L. HASTIE is the Chairman of the Executive Committee. Do you mean them, and do I in trust I ask you and them, Who you mean by the prominent member who receives the other seventy-five hundred dollars, and who the prominent Republican is who you say made such an arrangement. I don't know; but my next-door neighbor, who is more in active politics than I, tells me that you mean JAMES BOWERMAN and BENJAMIN MAHERNER. I have the pleasure of knowing Mr. CONNOVER, but Mr. MAHERNER and I were fellow-members of the Christian Association before it came to be as prosperous as it is now, and I am sure the report does him injustice. I have called to see him to ask him to contradict it, but on was in bed and unable to procure a contradiction of these slanderous stories. If they are true I am no judge of men. REPUBLICAN.

To Mr. Manierre.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I cut the enclosed from the report of the last meeting of the Board of Health:

"Gen. PALMER, late United States Appraiser, sent a communication complaining of the condition of Trinity place, garbage and refuse being scattered about, and no effort being made to remove them. Commissioner MANIERRE moved that a copy be sent to Senator CONKLING who seemed to possess the power of removal and appointment."

Isn't it bad enough for respectable gentlemen to lose their offices without being subject to insult? Does Mr. MANIERRE mean to intimate that the office-holders, whose removal Mr. CONKLING is supposed to have procured, were "garbage and refuse?" If not, what is the pertinency of his remark? Yours, A READER.

The Street-Car Commutator Nuisance, No. 9.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

The TIMES editorial of today, (Saturday, March 25,) headed "Platforms of Steam and Street Cars," has prompted me to add a second number under the heading of the first one, as in my occasional visits to the City since No. 1 appeared, I think I have seen some improvement on the points complained of in it.

For example, I have witnessed what I cannot recall having seen before, car conductors on the University-place and Nine-avenue cars, instead of elbowing their way through the car, run from the rear to the front platform to collect the fares there, when the streets were a mire of mud. On a Fourth-avenue car, where the only solicitude about passengers that I had ever before seen shown was to demand that extra penny above the ordinary fare on other lines, a car conductor actually turned and excused himself to me for keeping the front door open while collecting the fares on the front platform. On an Eighth-avenue car I have also seen a small hole, like the ticket-holes for selling tickets at the theatres, with an outside trap to it, through which the conductor takes in his fares from the front platform. Give the devil his due. All small favors thankfully received. Messrs. Managers of street cars.

But now, can't we get rid also of the platform, and of the inside collection of fare nuisance? What say you, Messrs. Car Managers? You hang up rules prohibiting passengers standing on the platforms, and when they are killed by violating them, through the carelessness of your own servants, you plead, in bar of damages, your rules. Gen. GRANT has just issued his proclamation against the Kuklukers of South Carolina. Do you think that he will hang this up and do nothing further? Not a bit of it. He will enforce it by the strong arm. When any one refuses to pay his fare in your cars, do you let him ride on to the end of his journey without molestation? Not a bit of it. You eject him. Yet you see individuals killed when you might have prevented it, and then put in your rules as a plea against damages. A human life is of less consequence in your eyes than the loss of a five-cent fare.

Further, not the conductors nor the drivers are responsible, but you gentlemen boards of directors. What right have you to make rules if you don't or can't enforce them? No one who has traveled on a front platform or near it, but must have seen that the driver, frequently, instead of attending to the road and his team, is employed in chatting with some one of his cronies who is on the platform with him. Hence chiefly your street-car accidents. As to the rear platforms, as I stated in No. 1, it is the convenient lurking place for your pick-pocket gentry. All ruffianly car exploits take place on one or the other of the other of the two platforms.

The remedy for all these is very simple. Narrow the entrance of your platforms to just sufficient standing-room for the conductor and for a single passenger to pass him.

Now, as to the inside collection of fares, this can only be gotten rid of by enforcing the rule of paying before entering, and by the gradual introduction of the ticket system. It is just as easy to the masses to this as to what they are obliged to do at steam railroads, ferry and other like offices. New-York has several very convenient centres where several companies might unite in a common ticket-office; for example, near the Astor House; at the junction of Broadway, Fifth-avenue and Twenty-third-street; at that of Broadway, Sixth-avenue and Thirty-first-street, besides furnishing the car conductors with packages of tickets for sale. Tickets are used, it is believed, in almost every city in the Union, except New-York. As profit seems to be the sole point of consideration here, the loss to individuals, like that of cent, or notes, which would take place in this case, to the advantage of the companies, might be more than an offset for fares on platforms, taken without scruple, although in flagrant violation of their very elastic rules

OCCASIONAL CITY VISITOR.

SATURDAY, March 25, 1871.

P. S. Will no' the ladies who may know them, and whose dresses suffer, put a little from the car-conductors' dirty boots as he collects the inside fares, and themselves to manage the manasers, upon whom this tem or the comfort and, may I add, e cautiness depends.

A Word to the Pulpit, and the Religious Press.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In your issue of the 25th ult. you say, "let the religious Press and Christian pulpit speak out as boldly and effectively as the Methodist is doing against the corruption of our City Government, and the uprising of popular indignation that must inevitably come some day will be sensibly hastened." This is true, and as a Presbyterian I believe it quite time that the religious Press should take a decided and determined stand against the terrible corruptions that are undermining our moral character and integrity as a people. In the face of this sweeping demoralization, even the pulpits, which ought to be alive with eloquent denunciation and rebuke, are silent, with occasionally the rare exception of some "sensational preacher," (as he is called,) who, seeing the mighty floods that are beating against the foundations of the church, dares utter the warning voice to avert, so far as in him lies, the danger and destruction he sees so clearly approaching. I am sorry to believe the church is fast losing its power over men by so steadily ignoring the great moral and social evils that seem everywhere to abound. How can the vital truth of the Gospel find an entrance into the hearts of a people of whom the demon of intemperance, lust, passion for gain, and political corruption has so largely taken the possession? Good men who love the cause of religion, everywhere are appalled by the vast strides the powers of evil are making, and are calling upon the religious Press and the pulpits to sound the alarm, and combine to exert all their powerful influence to counteract and defeat the advancing enemy that threatens both Church and State. If the pulpit is too inert to put forth its strength to save the State from being engulfed in its own corruptions, it will soon find that the Church itself must share the same fate, or become so weakened and worldly as to be almost powerless for good. Who can doubt that if the pulpits of the land would unitedly and persistently apply the truths of the Gospel boldly and earnestly to the remedy of the social and political corruptions of the day, their influence would not at once begin to appear in staying the progress of iniquity and crime, and in so elevating the standard of virtue, that bad men would no longer dare publicly to devise and execute their wicked schemes in the municipal, State and National councils? If the pulpits are not the educators of the people in all that pertains to morality and virtue, as well as in matters of theology, then there is no constituted authority to do this important and indispensable work.

The day has gone by when men are content to be fed on theological dogmas, and to sit and listen to the same old worn-out controversies and dull expositions on themes no one doubts or disputes. They want a live religion and a living Gospel; something that has practical use and power to do what they see and feel must be done, and which if not done by the power of the Gospel will not be done at all. Tens of thousands of church members stand this day ready to accuse the pulpits of neglect and indifference, because it makes little or no effort to stem the tides of crime and corruption that from so many sources, now threaten the very existence of our civil institutions. Tens of thousands are kept out of the church because of its apparent want of vital power, either to lift so many of its members sensibly above the low standard of the world, or to oppose itself successfully to the forces of evil arrayed against it. When the pulpit and the whole religious press of the country awakes to a full sense of its duty to God and man, we will see dissolving before our very eyes these vast wicked combinations and conspiracies, that now threaten the safety of the State and the prosperity of the Church itself.

CENTRAL NEW-YORK.

The Income Tax.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

A notice in the papers of March 31, signed by A. PLEASONTON, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, states that "persons whose income for the year 1870 did not exceed $2,000 are not required to make any returns, nor need they make any affidavits showing that their gross income did not exceed that amount." The writer, residing in Brooklyn, has been served with a blank income return, having a form of affidavit printed on it which requires him to swear that his income is less than $2,000. There is evidently a mistake somewhere, but what the public want to know is "WHICH IS WHICH."

THE KUKLUX IN MISSISSIPPI.

Gov. Alcorn's Special Message to the State Legislature—He Asks for Further Authority.

Below will be found the material portions of the Message in relation to the Kuklux Klan submitted to the Mississippi Legislature on Saturday last, and briefly alluded to in our telegrams:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

GENTLEMEN: While the State generally enjoys a repose unknown to it since the close of the war, the recent outrages at Meridian and at a few other places on our eastern border point to possibilities which demand special measures of detection and punishment. In addition to the authority already given you in my annual Message for authority to deal with the crimes of the Kuklux by an offer of rewards as high as $25,000, and added, what I now again urge upon you earnestly, "that the rewards offered for the detection of men engaged in outrages perpetrated by what is called Kuklux, in any county, shall, when paid by the Executive, be made a special charge upon the county, with such interest on the same as the Court of the State placed in my hands, a power which cannot fail in effectiveness will have been set in motion with certain success in not only detecting and punishing, but to a great extent in otherwise preventing the outrages of those midnight assassins.

To render still more effective the agencies of the Government for the repression of organized lawlessness on our eastern border, or anywhere else that it may show itself hereafter, I invite your attention earnestly to my Message of the 11th of February on the difficulties of the Auditor of Public Accounts as to the exercise of my power under the Militia law. The sixth section of that act authorizes me to organize the militia, but the Auditor has no power to pay the expenses incurred in that organization; and, though that question has been under the consideration of your honorable bodies for now several weeks, I call your attention respectfully to the fact that even the accounts of Gen. STAFFORD and Col. IRELAND for services in carrying out that organization remain still unpaid. I urge upon your consideration the expediency of settling the Auditor's doubts in this matter, and of placing it beyond question that the authority charged in the letter of the law with the right of calling out the militia shall not be excluded from the exercise of that right by a denial of his power to order payment for even a soldier's ration.

Section 85 of the Militia law gives me the power to "organize and equip not to exceed one regiment of cavalry." With a question of my authority to order payment for a single saddle or a cartouche-box, this conveyance of power becomes a dead letter. I again invite the attention of your honorable bodies to this fact, and do so with the earnest request that it be added to actual authority to organize the militia generally, you give me actual authority to organize and call into the field a cavalry regiment of picked men for operation wherever masked assassins shall be seen—the cost of the subsistence of those troops to be levied as a special tax upon the county to which they shall have been called by the appearance of armed and organized assassins. With this power made good in my hands, outside any scruples of the Auditor of Public Accounts, such tax-payers as shall dare to tolerate by their sympathies the performances of the Kuklux, will very soon find out that that toleration will have cost them heavily in penal taxes.

At the same time that we leave nothing undone to repress organized violence wherever it shows its head, it is no less our solemn duty to see that we leave nothing undone to remove all possible ground for its provocation. The race from which the American white is sprung has ever been restive under taxation and it is shown itself hot-headed to make an onnorious exercise of the taxing power a ground for individual vengeance or organized resistance. And a wise legislation, while determined in strengthening the power of repression, should never disregard those forces of society which, especially in closing up the work of revolution, are ever ready to come to the help of "peace and order." In no society for the peace and order of the State, I called your attention, in my special Message of the 8th of last month, to very grave points for the revision of our general and local taxes, and did so in view of the illustrations which I feel it my duty to urge upon your attention again, as possible irritations of the popular temper. A fair act, not only of justice, but of conciliation also, I recommend earnestly that no time shall be lost by the Legislature in arresting the assessments that go forward now in some counties on a basis that, while violating the intention of the Legislature, adds unnecessarily to the causes tending to increase popular dissatisfaction with the working of the Revenue law. There is much in the whole subject of the Revenue law which involves unnecessary burdens upon the tax-payers. I have already called your attention to the expediency of fixing a maximum to the commissions of Assessors and Collectors. I may add to that the propriety of deducting from the percentage the amount of all such commissions as he may have received on excessive assessments, whether the revision of those excesses shall be made by the Board of Supervisors or by the Legislature. Severe economy in our administration of the affairs of the State is, I repeat, one of the first conditions of success in all our measures for a vigorous repression of crime.

No demand in the interest of political repose and social order is made upon the wisdom of the Legislature more potently than that for a restriction upon the local power of taxation. Everywhere does a cheerful acceptance of the State tax, where the assessment has been fairly made, present itself, but in few if any of the counties do the taxes of the School Directors and of the Board of Supervisors meet a reception short of serious clamor. My reflections on this fact lead me, I feel it my duty to tell you plainly, to entertain apprehensions that we will not have done our duty of the preservation of good order if the Legislature do not give the people immediate and effective protection from all possible ground of discontent with their local taxes. With that view I, in the words of my Message of the 8th of February, "recommend earnestly that the issue of credits by the Board of Supervisors shall be placed immediately under rigid restrictions, and that their powers of taxation be limited to 4.0 per cent. on the State tax."

The School Directors present an administration which threatens by the wantonness of its extravagance to impress the more restive of our population with a sense that they are being oppressed by taxation. * * * The conciliatory words which we are bound in the interests of peace and order to go forward in conducting the public business apply with special force in the case of public schools. A sore need of the masses as these are, they are hailed with a popular favor which it is our bounden duty to do nothing whatsoever to check. The school system comes home to the fondest affections of the people, and should be so conducted as to draw out those anxieties with the greatest possible directness in support of the public schools.

Supplementary to the conciliations which I urge in the matter of taxation in this communication, I urge with equal earnestness the expediency of conciliating the affections, the conscience and the independence of the parents of the State, by giving them the option, where they exercise their right of separate schools, to select the teachers. The wisdom of this liberalizing of our present system of centralization will be felt in an improvement of the popular temper. Rev. Dr. ELDER, Catholic Bishop of this diocese, has urged this and other points of improvement in our school system upon my attention; and as an act of justice to that body I make this allusion to it, and submit with this Message his letter. Any liability and Christian benevolence which characterize this communication will command your attention for its every thought; you do not know that the piety, earnestness and cultivation of its author command for him the confidence and respect of men of all classes and creeds among our people.

I make all the foregoing recommendations in view of the work before me as conservator of the peace of the State. While regarding with calm indifference the violence and vituperation of a Press which represents in its rapid utterances the opinion of this people, I owe it to you, to myself, and to the interests of all good citizens, to entreat you to carry out, as far as possible, all the reforms I have pointed out here in the interests of a reduction of taxation and the freedom of education, so that, conscious of having given no cause for just irritation to the mass of violence we may be all the more determined in action when that man of violence shall have put upon us the duty to strike him down.

J. L. ALCORN, Governor.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE, April 1, 1871.

THE ERIE APPEAL CASES.

Points Made by Mr. Ramsey Before the Court of Appeals—Full Details of the Motions, Points and Decisions in all Three Cases.

On Tuesday the attention of the Court of Appeals at Albany was occupied in listening to arguments on appeals from orders made by the General Term of the Supreme Court of this District in the suits of the Erie Railway Company against JOSEPH H. RAMSEY, RAMSEY against the Erie Railway Company, and JAMES FISK, Jr., against the Albany and Susquehanna Railroad Company. The first appeal heard was from the General Term order affirming Judge BARNARD's orders adjudging Mr. RAMSEY guilty of contempt of Court, and fining him $5,000 for taking proceedings in the suit of the Erie Railway Company against him after he had been enjoined from so doing, but reducing the fine to $250 and costs.

The points made by Mr. RAMSEY on appeal are that the orders are appealable; that they are appealable to the Court of Appeals; that the injunction order was void; that the plaintiff could not proceed and take affirmative steps in the other action, and at the same time prevent Mr. RAMSEY from taking any steps therein; if the injunction was void, the imposition of $250 counsel fees, as part of the fine, was wholly illegal.

For the respondent it was argued:

First—The order was not appealable to the General Term. It was merely an initial order, one staying proceedings to enable the defendant as of course to answer. After the reference had been had, which he seeks to recover, or obtained an advantage by some motion it, he shall not be heard, nor shall he use the process of contempt to enforce his rights. Such a course in this matter is not appealable, both 2. The General Term of the third department had full and complete jurisdiction of the appeal.

Second—The plaintiff in error, Mr. RAMSEY, should have resisted, whether the affidavit of merits was sufficient, whether the decision of Judge BRADY was right, and whether it was reviewable at General Term, are not open to inquiry. The Court must assume that the Court has jurisdiction of the subject-matter, and of the parties, and is competent to grant the relief demanded. The defendant in error, Mr. FISK, had a right to rely upon the validity of the order, and to suppose that it would be obeyed. Indeed, the defendant in his own affidavit avowed his disobedience, and attempted to justify it, by the advice of counsel, that the order was void for want of jurisdiction. His language was, that he, "under such advice, and believing that he had the strict and legal right to do it, has gone on with the orderly conduct of his action," &c., that is to say, he did precisely that which he was commanded not to do.

Third—The affidavit of Mr. PECKHAM showed still less of defense than that of his client. He says on the 18th of February, 1870, that since the injunction order of January 24, 1870, he has been engaged in such action of RAMSEY against the Erie Railway Company, JAY GOULD and others, by giving notice of several motions to dismiss plaintiff's complaint, to render it more definite and certain, and for other relief." The violation of the injunction in RAMSEY's action on and before the 17th of December, 1869.

At the conclusion of the argument the Court took the papers and reserved decision. For the appellant, LYMAN TREMAIN and RUFUS W. PECKHAM, Jr.; for the respondents, DAVID DUDLEY FIELD.

The second appeal heard was from an order made by the General Term of the district in the suit of RAMSEY against ERIE, affirming the order made by Judge BARNARD staying the plaintiff's proceedings.

The facts of the case are briefly these: At a Special Term held by Justice BARNARD, the cause was moved for trial by the defendants, and the motion of the plaintiff for postponement was denied. The plaintiff was wholly unprepared for trial, having been under injunction against taking any proceedings in the cause until five days prior to the day when said motion was made, at which time the attorney who had procured the injunction filed a stipulation modifying the injunction so as to allow Mr. RAMSEY to prepare for trial, and the Judge thereupon dismissed the case, and entered the following orders:

Upon reading and filing the plaintiff's complaint, Upon order being entered, the cause to stand over to Nov. 14, 1870, at 10½ o'clock A. M., to fix the amount of extra allowance to the defendants, and to give plaintiff leave at that time to open the default and try the cause. The counsel for Mr. RAMSEY thereupon made a motion before the Special Term, held by Justice BARNARD, to open the default and set aside the order dismissing the complaint, who made the following order:

On reading and filing the affidavits of CHARLES TRACEY, RUFUS W. PECKHAM, JR., JOSEPH H. RAMSEY, a copy of the order, modifying the injunction in this action, so that the same shall not interfere with the trial of this action, nor with any preparation for such trial, and any party therein entered in this action on the 20th day of October, 1870, and the stipulation of FIELD and SHEARMAN, Esqs., to the same effect, dated and filed the same day a printed copy of the papers on appeal from order of Special Term continuing the injunction, notice of motion and copy order of Special Term, saying the defendants' proceedings until the hearing and decision of the motion on the part of the plaintiff, and on reading and filing the affidavits of HOWARD P. WILD, H. N. OTIS, JAY GOULD, and three affidavits of EDWARD ENSIGN, and the papers thereto attached, a copy of the order dismissing complaint, a copy of an order entered in this action as a Special Term held on the 19th day of January, 1870, at the Court-house in the village of Cooperstown, on the part of the defendants, and after hearing Mr. LYMAN TREMAIN, of counsel for plaintiff, and Mr. DAVID DUDLEY FIELD, of counsel for defendants.

It is ordered and adjudged that the order granted at the Special Term of this Court, held on the 25th day of October, 1870, dismissing the plaintiff's complaints herein, and holding the cause over until the 14th of November, 1870, to fix the amount of extra allowance to the defendants, and giving plaintiff leave at that time to move to open default and try the cause, be, and the whole and every part of such order hereby is and was vacated and set aside, and the complaint herein be, and the same hereby is restored. The defendants thereupon appealed from the last order to the General Term, and after the appeal had been argued and the decision of the Court reserved, but before the decision of the Court was rendered, the counsel for the defendants moved for an order staying all proceedings on the part of the plaintiff in this action until the decision of the appeal, which was resisted by the counsel for Mr. RAMSEY, but the order was granted, Justices BARNARD and CARDOZO concurring, and Judge INGRAHAM dissenting, and from this order the plaintiff appeals to the Court of Appeals.

The points made by Mr. RAMSEY's counsel on appeal are:

First—The order appealed from, it is submitted, is wholly illegal and should be reversed, because it was made, in the first instance, by the General Term instead of the Special Term, in plain violation of well-settled rules of law and practice applicable to the jurisdiction and powers of the said terms.

Second—Its decisions are not reviewable in the Court of Appeals.

Third—This order should be reversed, because it is based upon the mere arbitrary will of the Court, without any affidavits or other papers upon which the order was granted.

Fourth—This order cannot be sustained upon the theory that the papers upon the appeal which had just been argued and the decision thereon reserved disclosed a good reason for making the order.

Fifth—If the Court shall consider the appeal papers as properly before the General Term for the purpose of the motion to stay, and that such motion was founded upon such papers, then the following additional grounds and reasons for reversing such order to stay are insisted upon by the counsel for the appellant.

First—The Court was illegally constituted because Judge BARNARD was sitting in review of a decision made by him, and was disqualified.

Sixth—This order is appealable. The right to proceed in an action to judgment, and the corresponding rights to perpetuate evidence de bene esse, to examine the parties out of Court, to obtain discovery, to have issues framed and an order for jury trial, to strike out a defense as frivolous, to serve an amended complaint within the time allowed by law, to have the answer made more definite, to demur to an answer in a proper case, and to take any of the other of the numerous modern steps in order to bring issues to a speedy and successful determination—these are all "substantial rights, not resting in discretion," which are stricken down by an indefinite and uncertain period by this order, and are thus put in peril by it. This order is appealable. The defendant is not stayed by the order. The right to stand in a Court of justice on equal terms with your adversary, with your hands unbound, is a "substantial right not resting in discretion," that is overthrown by this order.

Seventh—The order should be reversed, with costs.

The following were the points made in behalf of the respondents:

First—This order is not appealable to this Court. It does not affect a substantial right; it is not upon a question of practice, and is resting in discretion. If there be any question of law in connection with it, it seems to be the one, whether proceedings ought to be stayed pending an appeal. Even if the order of the Special Term were not appealable to the General Term, the Court can entertain the appeal.

Second—The order was right upon its merits. The question involved in the appeal was whether the dismissal of the complaint should stand or not. If it were to stand, further proceedings would not only unnecessarily but burdensome. If it were to be opened, further proceedings would then be taken according to circumstances.

Third—The power to stay proceedings pending an appeal is inherent in the Court, unless restricted by statute. So far from this power being restricted in the present case, it is recognized. Section 348 of the Code mentions a stay upon appeal from a judgment to be granted "by the Court or Judge thereof," and while section 349 does not mention a stay, it cannot be supposed that the power exists to stay when an appeal is taken from a judgment, but not when an appeal is taken from an order. It was at one time supposed that an appeal from an order under section 349 operated as a stay of proceedings. But it is now generally understood that an order to stay is required. Either the special or General Term may grant the stay. Each has the power of the Court, and may each exercise it in any case, unless restricted by express statute.

Fourth—The merits of the appeal pending in the General Term do not arise upon the present appeal to this Court. The questions may come here by and by, and be premature now to discuss them.

Fifth—The present appeal should be dismissed or not decided appealed from should be affirmed. The decision was reserved.

DUNCAN CHEMAIN and RUFUS W. PECKHAM, Jr., for the appellants; DAVID DUDLEY FIELD for the respondents.

FISK VS. THE ALBANY AND SUSQUEHANNA RAILROAD COMPANY.

The third appeal was in the case of JAMES FISK, Jr., appellant, vs. The Albany and Susquehanna Railroad Company and others, respondents. The facts in the case are that on the 15th of December, 1870, Judge BRADY granted a motion to change the place of trial in this action from the County of New-York to the County of Albany unless the plaintiff's counsel should elect that it should be changed to Rensselaer County, and after the decision was announced by the Court, the plaintiff's counsel elected that it should be changed to Rensselaer. On the same day the plaintiff's counsel entered, ex parte, an order to change the place of trial to Rensselaer. On the return of an order to show cause, why this order should not be rescinded, the Judge directed a corrected order, which was drawn and entered, reciting the facts of the election. Both orders bear date of Dec. 15. On the hearing of a subsequent motion on the part of the plaintiff to strike out the recital, Judge BRADY denied such motion, and adjudged that such election had been made on the hearing before him. The plaintiff then appealed from these orders to General Term. Counsel for the defendants had the order changing the place of trial to Rensselaer entered in that County. The General Term, on motion of the defendants, dismissed the appeal, and the plaintiff having appealed to this Court from the order of dismissal, this motion is now made by the defendants to dismiss the said appeal.

The following are the points offered by the counsel for the appellants:

First—The order appealed from is appealable, and must be so regarded by the Court on this motion, that, after the Court had announced its decision that the place of trial be changed from the County of New-York to the County of Albany, unless the plaintiff's counsel should elect that it be changed to the County of Rensselaer, as he did elect, and it was ordered that the place of trial should be changed to the County of Rensselaer, the plaintiff having voluntarily acted under the order, and thereby obtained an advantage, instead of taking his ground of appeal from the order, as he might have done, and having elected to have the place of trial changed to Rensselaer instead of Albany, the order and place of trial having been consented to and acted upon, the place of trial must take place in Rensselaer instead of Albany, the order became practically an order by consent. The appeal by the plaintiff therefrom is in bad faith, and every appeal to reverse said order should be dismissed, nor should a plaintiff be heard in any appellate Court on such appeal.

Third—This appeal should not be entertained by the Court, on the allegation of the appellant, that the General Term of the third department had no jurisdiction, and that the order appealed from was dismissed by the General Term, in the first department, for the following reasons, viz.: 1. Whether the error is one of jurisdiction or not which is apparent upon the face of the papers, and which if it exists the party has consented to the commission of, which he seeks to recover, or obtained an advantage by acting under it, he shall not be heard, nor shall he use the process of contempt to enforce his rights. Such a course in this matter is not appealable, both 2. The General Term of the third department had full and complete jurisdiction of the appeal.

Second—The plaintiff, Mr. RAMSEY, should have resisted, whether the affidavit of merits was sufficient, whether the decision of Judge BRADY was right, and whether it was reviewable at General Term, are not open to inquiry. The Court must assume that the Court has jurisdiction of the subject-matter, and of the parties, and is competent to grant the relief demanded. The defendant in error, Mr. FISK, had a right to rely upon the validity of the order, and to suppose that it would be obeyed. Indeed, the defendant in his own affidavit avowed his disobedience, and attempted to justify it, by the advice of counsel, that the order was void for want of jurisdiction. His language was, that he, "under such advice, and believing that he had the strict and legal right to do it, has gone on with the orderly conduct of his action," &c., that is to say, he did precisely that which he was commanded not to do.

Third—The affidavit of Mr. PECKHAM showed still less of defense than that of his client. He says on the 18th of February, 1870, that since the injunction order of January 24, 1870, he has been engaged in such action of RAMSEY against the Erie Railway Company, JAY GOULD and others, by giving notice of several motions to dismiss plaintiff's complaint, to render it more definite and certain, and for other relief." The violation of the injunction in RAMSEY's action on and before the 17th of December, 1869.

At the conclusion of the argument the Court took the papers and reserved decision. For the appellant, LYMAN TREMAIN and RUFUS W. PECKHAM, Jr.; for the respondents, DAVID DUDLEY FIELD.

The second appeal heard was from an order made by the General Term of the district in the suit of RAMSEY against ERIE, affirming the order made by Judge BARNARD staying the plaintiff's proceedings.

The facts of the case are briefly these: At a Special Term held by Justice BARNARD, the cause was moved for trial by the defendants, and the motion of the plaintiff for postponement was denied. The plaintiff was wholly unprepared for trial, having been under injunction against taking any proceedings in the cause until five days prior to the day when said motion was made, at which time the attorney who had procured the injunction filed a stipulation modifying the injunction so as to allow Mr. RAMSEY to prepare for trial, and the Judge thereupon dismissed the case, and entered the following orders:

Upon reading and filing the plaintiff's complaint, Upon order being entered, the cause to stand over to Nov. 14, 1870, at 10½ o'clock A. M., to fix the amount of extra allowance to the defendants, and to give plaintiff leave at that time to open the default and try the cause. The counsel for Mr. RAMSEY thereupon made a motion before the Special Term, held by Justice BARNARD, to open the default and set aside the order dismissing the complaint, who made the following order:

On reading and filing the affidavits of CHARLES TRACEY, RUFUS W. PECKHAM, JR., JOSEPH H. RAMSEY, a copy of the order, modifying the injunction in this action, so that the same shall not interfere with the trial of this action, nor with any preparation for such trial, and any party therein entered in this action on the 20th day of October, 1870, and the stipulation of FIELD and SHEARMAN, Esqs., to the same effect, dated and filed the same day a printed copy of the papers on appeal from order of Special Term, continuing the injunction, notice of motion and copy order of Special Term, saying the defendants' proceedings until the hearing and decision of the motion on the part of the plaintiff, and on reading and filing the affidavits of HOWARD P. WILD, H. N. OTIS, JAY GOULD, and three affidavits of EDWARD ENSIGN, and the papers thereto attached, a copy of the order dismissing complaint, a copy of an order entered in this action as a Special Term held on the 19th day of January, 1870, at the Court-house in the village of Cooperstown, on the part of the defendants, and after hearing Mr. LYMAN TREMAIN, of counsel for plaintiff, and Mr. DAVID DUDLEY FIELD, of counsel for defendants.

It is ordered and adjudged that the order granted at the Special Term of this Court, held on the 25th day of October, 1870, dismissing the plaintiff's complaints herein, and holding the cause over until the 14th of November, 1870, to fix the amount of extra allowance to the defendants, and giving plaintiff leave at that time to move to open default and try the cause, be, and the whole and every part of such order hereby is and was vacated and set aside, and the complaint herein be, and the same hereby is restored. The defendants thereupon appealed from the last order to the General Term, and after the appeal had been argued and the decision of the Court reserved, but before the decision of the Court was rendered, the counsel for the defendants moved for an order staying all proceedings on the part of the plaintiff in this action until the decision of the appeal, which was resisted by the counsel for Mr. RAMSEY, but the order was granted, Justices BARNARD and CARDOZO concurring, and Judge INGRAHAM dissenting, and from this order the plaintiff appeals to the Court of Appeals.

The points made by Mr. RAMSEY's counsel on appeal are:

First—The order appealed from,

It appears that the parties were married [illegible] Bureau years since, and in the year [illegible]. The wife, who is plaintiff, claims that her husband treated her cruelly and improperly during their entire married life. The defendant, who is a practicing lawyer in [illegible], claims that there was no serious difficulty between them before she left; that her leaving was voluntary abandonment, without any reasonable cause, and that [illegible] with whom he did not wish her to associate; that after the abandonment she went to [illegible], taking her children with her, and that she never communicated with him or them except through lawyers. She now sues for $1,500 a year alimony, and $1,000 counsel fee. In opposition to the allowance of alimony, defendant claims that he has no means of his own, but depends for his living on his father, who makes him a small yearly allowance. While admitting defendant's moral character, to suspect his children, his counsel contented that no case on the question of alimony [illegible] where the husband was in the position of a [illegible] and that the motive is a [illegible].

DAMAGES BY A RAILROAD ACCIDENT.

Norman Powers, Administrator of Michael Corcoran vs. The Hudson River Railroad Company.—This is an action to recover $5,000 damages against the defendant; $3,000 of which is claimed on the legal value of Michael Corcoran deceased, and the other $1,000 as the actual value of his horses and wagon. The circumstances of the case are as follows: On the 23d of October, 1870, the deceased, Michael Corcoran, was driving his team and wagon on Dock-street, in the village of Yonkers, which crosses the railroad track at that point. Corcoran was followed by another man, also driving a team. As they approached the track both drew up along side of it, to allow the up train to pass. As soon as this train had gone by, Corcoran started to cross the track, followed by the other teamster. Just as Corcoran had cleared the up-track, and his horses heads had got on a line with the outer rail of the down track, the down train which had been concealed by a bend in the road, appeared within about 150 feet of his wagon. Simultaneously with the approach of the train, the flag men of the road shook their flag in front of Corcoran's horses' heads, causing him to immediately rein them up, and thereby the train struck him, killed his horses, broke his wagon and killed himself, his skull body being carried a short distance on the cow-catcher. It is claimed on behalf of plaintiff that the train gave no whistle as a warning of its approach, and that it is [illegible] been for the confusion created by the flag men in front of the horses, Corcoran could have cleared the track and escaped. The case is still on.

C. W. Bangs for plaintiff. Frank Loomis and Mr. Burrill for defendant.

ALLEGED FALSE IMPRISONMENT.

Rowpins vs. Spelman et al.—This action, which was for obtaining an order of arrest against plaintiff without sufficient grounds, was concluded by the jury's disagreeing. In addition to the testimony in the case already published in the TIMES, it appeared that the missing affidavits had been found on file by the defendants, and those claimed on the part of plaintiff, as being different from the copies served, were found on comparison to correspond therewith. It further appeared that the order which was claimed as disbarring plaintiff from attorneyship of Massachusetts was a certificate made by a single Judge, arbitrary in its character, and without placing any reasons therefor on file. The testimony of defendants as to the original statements contained in the affidavits, on which the order of arrest was granted, corresponded generally with those affidavits.

It was stated by the jurors, after their discharge, that they stood for defendants against two for plaintiff.

S. H. Randall for plaintiff; Dubois Smith for defendants.

THURSDAY, April 6—P. M.

The Treasury sold $2,000,000 Gold at noon today at 110 27-32@110 43 ₱ cent. The amount bid for amounted to over $5,300,000; part of it below 110 ₱ cent. In the open market, before this sale, the price was 110⅝@110⅞ ₱ cent. After the sale the quotation fell to 110⅜@110⅝ ₱ cent., but subsequently recovered to 110⅝ ₱ cent. Active speculation has nearly disappeared from the Gold Room. The changes from day to day, and from hour to hour, are so inconsiderable as to scarcely pay the Brokers for spending four or five hours every day, and sometimes six or seven hours in watching the market. The business of the Gold Exchange Bank in "clearing" the daily transactions has also fallen off from sixty, eighty or a hundred millions per day, in gross, to about twenty millions. The Foreign Exchanges, while supported by trade balances which would seem to require immense remittances, are comparatively uninteresting. The rates are nominally firm at Specie shipping rates, but in one way or another the Bankers appear to cover their drafts without shipping Gold Coin to any appreciable extent. We have deemed it proper for six or eight weeks past to keep before our readers interested in Gold and Exchange, the contingency of such shipments to a considerable amount through the Spring months. If we have been mistaken, the error has been on the safe side. It really looks at present as though the April movement will amount to very little more than the insignificant sums of American Gold Coin sent forward in March. Bills on London today are 109¾ net to 110 ₱ cent., less ½ ₱ cent. brokerage. The amount selling, outside of the settlements of credits at the counters of the leading Bankers, is not large. The Custom demand for Gold for the day was $619,000. The Treasury office here will receive about $3,000,000 from this source as against $2,000,000 sold today.

The Money market has resumed a steadier appearance than on Tuesday and Wednesday, but at higher rates than before the disturbance of the present week. The Brokers are paying 6@7 ₱ cent. on Call Loans.

On the Stock Exchange the Public Funds have varied but slightly from yesterday's prices; the 5-20s of 1867 are 111¾@111¾ ₱ cent., and the other 5-20s, and the long 6 ₱ cents of 1881, ruled in about the same proportion. The subscriptions to the New Loan, 5 ₱ cents, are going on steadily, and by the close of the week will exceed $35,000,000. They already amount to $28,250,000. In the Railway movement speculation was somewhat irregular through the early hours of the day, and some signs of reaction against the market seemed not improbable about 1 o'clock. The realisations on Reading Stock continued from yesterday, and there was a pause in some of the Western Roads. But later in the dealings the prices were firmer again, and in the case of Toledo and Wabash a fresh hold was taken of the Stock, which influenced, to some extent, the general list. The stock of the Ohio and Mississippi kept firm on the assured success of the negotiation of $3,500,000, on Monday next, of the Bonds of the Company to provide means for contracting the gauge and equipping the line to its new connection with the Baltimore and Ohio. It is now believed that the bids for the Bonds will be above 80 ₱ cent., certainly not under this figure.

After the late Boards the following quotations were made as compared with Wednesday night:

Mr. J. M. DOUGLASS, after making up the Annual Report of 1870, of which the foregoing is an abstract, resigned the office of President of the Company on account of bad health, and contemplates a tour in Europe, after which he has partially consented to accept the office of Counsel of the Company, which he held before he was made President, on the resignation of Mr. OSBORN some years ago. The office of President has not yet been filled. It is probable that Mr. OSBORN, now in Chicago, will return to its duties, at least temporarily.

MR. JOHN HOWARD WAINWRIGHT, a much-esteemed member, for many years past, of the Stock Exchange, and a gentleman of fine literary taste and culture, died very suddenly at his residence, up-town, this morning. Aside from business pursuits, in which he was never ambitious of large fortune, and independent of his devotion to letters, Mr. WAINWRIGHT was warmly esteemed as a good citizen and a true and ingenuous friend.

The accounts of the March traffic on the Western Roads are more favorable than for the previous month, although the traffic in the earlier weeks was affected by the bad condition of the country roads.

The St. Louis and Iron Mountain Road earned in March $144,533, as against $102,562 same month last year.

Memorandum for Owners of Stocks.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

As $28,500,000 of Mr. BOUTWELL'S $200,000,000 Funding Fives have been already taken, we will assume that the loan will be a success. The subscriptions are doubtless mainly in the form of converting Five-twenties. As the new bonds are only issued to replace the Five-twenties, there is no practical difference between these conversions and cash subscriptions. Under the guiding management of the experienced Government bond-brokers, who have now interested themselves in the business, the process of funding the United States debt at a lower rate will go steadily on, and before long we shall see the 4½ per cents taken along with Fives.

This improvement of the Government credit means higher prices for all sound corporate securities. It means that our people are beginning to recognize the wealth and stability of their own country, and to learn that, if it is not old, it is at least old enough to be of age, and to transact business on terms more favorable than those to which it has been compelled of late years to submit. Daily this is becoming better understood, and its practical bearing, on the matter under consideration, is that money, invested in securities of sound character, must in future bring smaller returns to the capitalist who does not invest his labor along with his money.

Shrewd business men, interested in placing new securities, are already using this argument to help the sale of their wares. Observe how FISK & HATCH are using it to push the sale of Railroad Bonds which they have in charge—one of the Roads being, as yet, an unfinished undertaking. Notice the improving demand among investors for known railroad bonds, and the recent advance in many investment stocks, of which Fort Wayne at 99@99½ is the readiest example, as it is simply an interminable annuity of $7 that is represented by each share.

The point I wish to make is this, that the great and wealthy holders of railroad property are more directly interested in the success of the new Fives than any other class, as the effect of that success must inevitably be to raise the market price of their dividend-paying securities. To co-operate, therefore, in promoting this success is their very direct

NEWS OF THE DAY.

EUROPE.

Nothing decisive has occurred in the contest between the French Republic and the Paris insurgents during the past two days. The rebels hold Forts d'Issy and Vanves and keep up a fire upon the position of the Government troops at Chatillon, and various insignificant skirmishes are reported. The insurgents threaten retaliation in the treatment of prisoners. A levy has been ordered in Paris of all men from seventeen to thirty-five. There has been slight disturbance at Limoges, and the Colonel in command of the forces was assassinated at Marseilles. Order has been entirely restored and the Insurgent Committee have fled from the city. The Paris Deputies have agreed upon a plan of conciliation in which they insist that the municipal body shall have the right of deciding all questions relative to the organization of the city, including matters of finance, instruction and public worship.

The Princess of WALES gave birth to a boy yesterday....The Spanish Minister for the Colonies yesterday, denied any intention on the part of the Government to sell any of its West Indian possessions....The Convention abrogating the restrictions on the navigation of the Black Sea, has been ratified.

CONGRESS.

In the Senate, yesterday, Mr. DAVIS, of Kentucky, made an explanation of a scene which recently occurred between himself and Representative BUTLER, of Massachusetts, in which he fully corroborated the version heretofore published. The question of admitting to seats GOLDTHWAITE, of Alabama, and BLODGETT, of Georgia, was then discussed, but not decided, after which the resolution for an investigation of the condition of affairs at the South was taken up. Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN, of New-Jersey, made a speech in favor of legislation for the protection of life and property. Remarks were also made by PRATT, of Indiana, after which the Senate adjourned without action on the pending question.

In the House a bill was introduced providing for the erection of public buildings in Brooklyn, after which the debate on the bill to enforce the Fourteenth Amendment was resumed. After a number of short speeches on each side the previous question was ordered, and Mr. SHELLABARGER closed the debate with a speech of an hour in length, urging the passage of the bill. A vote was then taken on an amendment striking out the passage giving the President authority to suspend the habeas corpus, which was rejected—yeas 101, nays 105. A motion to reconsider was laid on the table—116 to 94. After several amendments the bill was passed under the operation of the previous question by a vote of 118 to 91.

STATE LEGISLATURE.

In the Senate, yesterday, the New-York City Two Per Cent. TAX Levy bill was called up for final passage, when Mr. PARKER moved to recommit, with instructions to strike out the second section. He regarded the bill as most remarkable in its provisions. An animated and protracted debate immediately sprung up, and the bill was fully discussed in all its bearings. Messrs. TWEED, CREAMER, NORTON and the other prominent adherents of the measure stuck to their colors, and the debate apparently made no impression upon them. Several amendments were offered, from time to time, but nearly all defeated by a party vote, and the bill finally passed in nearly its original and most objectionable form.

GENERAL.

Baron SCHLOEZER, the new Prussian Minister, arrived at Havana, from Mexico, yesterday, on his way to Washington.

The Rome, N. Y., bank burglars, who were convicted on the 4th inst., at Watertown, attempted to evade sentence on Wednesday morning by blowing open the Watertown jail with powder. A heavy explosion followed, blowing off the back door of the jail and blowing out one of the windows. The Sheriff hastened to the spot and found the gang ready to come out of the hole the powder had made, which was not quite large enough, so none got away. Each of the burglars were sentenced the same day to the Auburn State Prison for ten years each.

The Hartford Evening Post of yesterday claims that the entire Republican State ticket, with the exception of the Governor, has been elected in Connecticut, JEWELL having run behind his ticket on account of the Capitol question.

St. Mary's Mission, a town of 400 or 500 inhabitants, twenty-five miles west of Topeka, Kansas, is reported to have been almost entirely destroyed by fire. The railroad depot is about all that is saved.

In the Ohio Legislature on Wednesday a resolution indorsing President GRANT's San Domingo policy was taken up and a substitute adopted by a party vote, declaring that in regard to the extension of our borders and the acquisition of territory, as well as every other measure of public concern, they indorsed as sound political wisdom the principles embodied in the declaration of President GRANT, that no policy should be enforced against the will of the people.

One MAX DEGRAW, of New-York, attempted to commit suicide in Philadelphia, on Wednesday night, by pouring laudanum in a glass of ale he had called for at a tavern. He swallowed the contents, but was relieved by a physician at the Station-house. Before morning he was found suspended in his cell, cut down and resuscitated. He says he has spent $60,000 in six years. He will probably be sent to the insane asylum.

The case of CHARLES EACKER, on trial at Fonda, N. Y., for the murder of THOS. BURDICK, came to a sudden stop, yesterday, one of the jurors being taken with a fit.

Both Houses of the New-Jersey Legislature adjourned sine die yesterday. The Senate passed the bill appropriating the riparian moneys to the school fund, over the Governor's veto.

The great Church case, growing out of the suspension of GEORGE H. STEWART, and involving the property of the First Reformed Presbyterian Church in Philadelphia, was closed yesterday, when Judge WILLIAMS charged the jury in favor of Dr. WYLIE, Mr. STUART and his friends. The jury had not rendered a verdict up to a late hour.

The propeller W. T. Graves arrived at Buffalo from Chicago yesterday afternoon. This is the first arrival through the Straits this season.

The Welland Canal was opened yesterday.

Lumbering has suffered from the unusually early Spring. It is expected that the production will fall short 80,000 pieces.

Yesterday being the annual Fast in Massachusetts, it was observed in Boston in the usual manner. Business was suspended, the churches were filled, and places of amusement were thronged. The weather was delightful.

The Ohio State Medical Association organized at Cincinnati on Wednesday, when Dr. W. W. DAWSON, of Cincinnati, was elected President for the coming year; Dr. HALL was re-elected Secretary, and Dr. THOMPSON, Treasurer. Dayton was selected as the next place for holding a meeting.

The Kentucky State Medical Convention yesterday elected Dr. WEBB, of Covington, President for the coming year; Dr. DRAKE, Corresponding Secretary; and Dr. TODD, Treasurer. Louisville has been fixed upon as the place for holding the next meeting.

We are indebted to Mr. BOWERS, purser of the Mexican steamer City of Merida for favors in the prompt delivery of our letters and files.

New-York Rising Against Its Masters.

Last night's meeting at the Cooper Union was the most imposing political demonstration which this City has witnessed for several years. Not imposing by virtue of the braying of multitudinous brass bands and much burning of blue fire; not imposing even because of mere numbers, though the hall was crowded to its utmost capacity; but imposing in the best and highest sense, because it presented a magnificent assemblage of thoughtful and intelligent citizens, brought together by a common sense of duty and a common resentment of wrong. No party trumpet could have summoned a meeting so thoroughly representative of all the varied interests of this great community, and so keenly appreciative of intellectual and oratorical display of the highest order. The Bar sent some of its brightest ornaments, and a liberal contribution of its rank and file; distinguished leaders in the Christian Church were there, and men of the highest name in the walks of commerce. Large property-owners might have been numbered by the score, and the flower of the great working class from the store, the workshop, and the counting-room were there, to testify by their presence and applause how keenly they sympathized with the great crusade in favor of right and justice and free government which the meeting was designed to inaugurate. Not a point of vigorous argument, biting irony, or scathing denunciation was lost upon the mass of reflective and enlightened citizenship that faced the chair. The speakers addressed themselves as to thinking men, and they judged well of what was said.

As Mr. EVARTS justly remarked, had the labors of the Council of Reform been destined to yield no other result than this, they had not wrought in vain. The men who misgovern us could appreciate the significance of such a demonstration, as fully as they could the opinions that swayed a Ward meeting, or controlled a caucus of roughs. To us, who have labored to form that public sentiment, of which the meeting was a noble expression, it was no slender gratification to find the popular pulse beat so truly to a repetition of the special appeals that we have so often made. We have held that there were honest Democrats who were ashamed of the infamy of Tammany, and who would forward any movement to rid their party of the "Ring." The President of last night's meeting, Ex-Mayor HAVEMEYER, an honest and upright Democrat of the times when that party in this City had not cast principle to the winds, emphasized by his position, and gave trenchant expression by his words, to this opinion. We have stigmatized in the strongest terms the inconsequential and delusive character of the report of the Astor white-washing committee. Judge BARRETT's scornful reference to this transaction was cheered to the echo. We have condemned without stint the unconstitutional and fraudulent Tax-levy scheme. The masterly exposition given by Mr. EVARTS of the enormity of this proposal, and the eloquent denunciation by Mr. BEECHER of some of its fruits, elicited the hearty and unanimous approval of an auditory whose moral greatness was even more apparent than its numbers. The Republican journalism that coquets with Tammany, and the corrupt wing of the party that shares its pay, had, last night, unmistakable evidence of what the best members of every section of this community think of them. The Press that is gagged, and the leading citizens who are either deceived or bribed by an unscrupulous Ring, are as distinctly recognized and marked out for condemnation by the independent and educated voters of this City, as the salaried servants of Tammany who misrepresent us in the Legislature, and the Republicans who betray us at the polls.

Last night the people began to realize fully their own power, and we shall not have to wait long to see how effectively they can use it. "It will no longer," said Mr. EVARTS, "be a pride, but a shame and disgrace, to be a New-Yorker, if New-Yorkers cannot lift themselves out of the infamy into which they have sunk." The manhood of this City has been appealed to as it never was since the flag was fired upon at Sumter, and, with capable leadership, the new war against an insolent oligarchy can be carried to an issue as successful as the old one. As was well shown last night, we owe it not only to ourselves, but to the nation, that the crying scandal of local misrule should be removed. Our common institutions have been outraged, and made a byword and a hissing by the men who have cheated themselves into power in this State and City. And further, as Mr. EVARTS again showed, suppose a Presidential election should turn upon the fraudulently-obtained and falsely-returned vote of New-York—would the men who took up their muskets to enforce the peaceful vote of 1800 not again support, by the same means, the true vote of the country in 1872, or at any future period? It is perfectly true that we are at this moment coming face to face with the great and real problems of politics, and that no subject among all the dead issues of previous struggles occupies the mind of the country at large half so much as the question how republican institutions are to come out of their crucial trial in New-York.

The "noble minority" of the Press, alluded to by Judge BARRETT, was loudly cheered last night. The same speaker deplored the want of concerted action among the organs of public opinion, from whom aid in a fight for truth and honesty might be expected. The people need hardly be reminded that in this, as in other details of the conflict, they have the remedy in their own hands. Let the stipendiaries of the Ring have the option of living by the Ring, and that alone, or of earning the support and approval of the people, and we shall see fewer journals so sollicitous of keeping on both sides of the political fence. In a crusade like this, those who are not with us are against us, and neither from the Press, the politician, nor the citizen, can a hollow truce with the Ring coexist with any good service in the cause of reform.

The Leading Races of the World.

Whatever may be thought of DARWIN's theory of the "Descent of Man" and his general hypothesis, there can be no doubt that in his principle of "natural selection," or the "survival of the fittest," he has struck on one of the great causes of the variety we behold in the animal and vegetable kingdoms. It is a principle working with equal power in human races, as in plants or the lower animals. The weakest is forever being driven to the wall. The "table of nature" only offers places for a certain number of races, as well as individuals, and those who have not the physical or moral power are being continually forced to a lower position, and at last seem to die out or starve amid the families of nations. Natural selection along the whole course of history has been choosing its special races, and breeding them as leaders of men. The moralist and the Christian will have a special satisfaction in knowing that this unconscious drift of "choice," this law of survival, is always toward a higher physical and mental and moral power. The current of history, even in the view of the materialist, is, on the whole, in the direction of the elevation of the human race. The "breeds" in each period which survive and gain control do so through purer morals, or higher intelligence, or a better religion. The causes which sap the power of nations, and overthrow forms of civilization, are always moral. The "survival" in each age is of the races who have governed their vices and passions, or exhibited more self-control in government, or have improved their intellects, and have thus not been led away to superstition or bigotry, and have been enabled to preserve family life pure and physical power fresh.

In this age, one of the great "struggles for existence" has evidently been going on between two great families of races—the "Germanic," including the English-speaking and the German peoples, and the "Romanized Celtic," including the Irish and the French. For more than a century the Celts of France, with their large mixture of Latin and Teutonic blood, have led the modern civilized races, though for the last three hundred years in constant struggle with the Germanic, both the English and the Germans. During the same period, the pure Celts of Ireland have been in as constant struggle with the Anglo-Saxons, though uniformly beaten and crushed. Seven years ago, LOUIS NAPOLEON, leading the victorious Celtic race, aimed at planting the mixed Latin and Celtic peoples on the soil of the New World. From this blunder he never recovered. Urged by the reproaches incidental to this defeat, he provoked the final struggle with the Teutonic race too early for his own preparations, and his utter overthrow prostrated the whole Celtic race of France beneath the feet of the Germans. It has probably done even more. It has placed the Germans at the head of European power and civilization. Henceforth the Romanized Celts—indeed the whole Celtic race—must take an inferior position in the progress of races. Wherever they have been tried, they have been found wanting in civic virtues. In Ireland, when they controlled the country, they exhibited nothing but a spectacle of barbarous civil war. Their revolutions since have been only distinguished by bombast and murder. Masses of them have been transferred to our cities, and demagogues have erected, by their means, the most corrupt Government anywhere seen in the modern world, except in the head-quarters of the Celtic races—Paris itself.

In France, the Celts have equally failed. Just as in the time of TACITUS, no rule but that of the soldier and the priest has ever held them in subjection. They have no idea of self-government; of self-control for the sake of a State; of submission to the will of a majority. They inaugurate a new revolution amid the ashes of their country, desolated by a foreign invader. Nothing but the sword will ever subject them. In the large towns, their lack of self-control has destroyed family life and weakened physical power. With all the brilliant qualities of the Celtic races—their unquestioned bravery, their wit and genius, and their heroic devotion to the persons of their leaders—they must go down before the higher self-control, the purer family life, the stronger physique, the more elevated morals and greater political skill of the Germanic races. During the next decade of centuries it is evidently the English-speaking and Teutonic races which are to lead modern civilization and to govern the world. Natural or providential selection has chosen them for the superior races. In their hands will be the destinies of the future.

The Police and the Burglars.

The efforts lately made by the Police authorities to suppress "keno" and "faro banks," as well as other more disreputable establishments, throughout the City, are worthy of praise and encouragement so far as they go. But while they are looking after the gamblers, we trust they will not quite forget the burglars. Never have these knights of the jimmy displayed more audacity, or operated with more impunity and success, than now. The robbery of the Central Park Savings Bank on Monday, in broad daylight, at the busiest time of the morning, and in full view of a bustling street, has not been equaled in boldness since the somewhat similar exploit at the Park Bank two or three years ago. One night last week, a bright moonlight night, a tailor's shop in Fifth-avenue, on the second floor, was entered through one of the windows—the burglars, it is supposed, climbing up a water pipe, and carrying off property to the value of many thousands of dollars. This, however, is not so surprising a feat considering the fact that thieves have more than once of late gained access by means of the verandas or portico, to the upper floors of dwelling-houses in the evening, while the occupants were at dinner, and without fear of interruption, have quietly selected their booty and carried it off.

Yet, while the knaves are thus daily growing in skill and dash, the Police have by no means kept pace with them in either particular. The cases in which a thief is captured, or stolen property recovered, appear to be getting less, in proportion to the robberies, every day. That this alarming inefficiency is in a great measure ascribable to the pernicious and demoralizing system of rewards, we have already shown; but that evil influence is not peculiar to our own City, where there are doubtless other local causes working to aid this disagreeable end. What these causes are, we shall not now attempt to specify; suffice it to say that the corruption which rules in our civic Government, and which is sapping the vitality, the honesty, and the usefulness of one after another of our municipal departments, appears to extend its foul taint to our Police administration as well. Like master like man, is an old and true proverb, and we cannot expect to have a trusty or efficient Police force, so long as the men who control and appoint them differ from ordinary criminals only in the magnitude of their crimes.

A Parable and Its Application.

Some time ago a number of United States citizens, most of them frugal persons of limited means, invested their money in an English railroad, the management of which was supposed to be founded on the usual standard of commercial probity. In all, they held about sixty thousand shares, representing six million dollars. After a time, these shareholders were not a little surprised and disappointed to find all dividends suspended—and yet the railroad was in excellent working order, and produced a very large income. They then resolved to send over a representative to England for the purpose of getting some sort of power in the direction of the company, and to this representative they intrusted their sixty thousand shares. The agent, soon after his arrival in London, sent the shares to be transferred, and they were instantly seized—stolen, in fact—by the fraudulent directors of the road. This was in itself a great outrage, but the shareholders relied fully upon the English Courts to do them justice. Strange to say, the judges were found to be in league with the thieves. An injunction was issued forbidding the shareholders even to seek for restitution of their property, and from that day to this the 60,000 shares have never been restored to their lawful owners. The directors who ordered them to be seized employ a very eminent firm of London solicitors, and Bench and Bar alike seem determined to cheat the American shareholders out of their property.

Now if this event had really occurred, what would the American people have said about it? Would they have been disposed to commend the conduct of British railroad directors, or British lawyers and judges? Would they have been in a hurry to invest their money in any more English securities? Would they not have pronounced the entire transaction a disgrace to the English name?

Well, the circumstances related really did occur—only the railroad invested in was an American road, and the investors were English people. That transposition in the persons concerned in the narrative does not affect the character of the transaction. The seizure of the shares was a robbery, unfortunately rendered legal by a Judge's sanction. What can be the opinion of the American people of such a trick? Now it must be remembered that the people who stole these bonds are represented in the Courts by a legal firm of which Mr. DAVID DUDLEY FIELD is the head. If Mr. FIELD ever advised his clients to make restitution, no proof of it has ever been offered. He has continued to act for them, whereas it might have been supposed that he would have said: "This seizure of sixty thousand shares of stock must be atoned for before I can go on with any of your cases. The act itself is without excuse, and my honor is compromised by acting for clients who committed a very gross fraud while my firm were their legal advisers, and who expect us to identify ourselves with most of the causes they bring into Court." We do not accuse Mr. FIELD's firm of recommending the seizure—what ground they took we have no means of knowing. They did not apply for the injunction we have referred to—but they are known pre-eminently as FISK and GOULD's lawyers, and it is hard to believe that one or other of them has not been consulted in the prolonged litigation arising out of the transaction described. They are still the legal representatives of FISK and GOULD, and restitution has not been made—two facts which cannot be explained away. Mr. FIELD merely contents himself with endeavoring to discredit everybody who impugns his conduct. Gen. BARLOW is a "person." The TIMES, he says—and it is about the fiftieth hypothesis he has put forward in relation to the TIMES—is controlled by Mr. JOHN BONNER, one of the litigants against the Erie Road. If this were true, it would not be an answer to the charges brought against FISK and GOULD, or against Mr. FIELD for acting as their legal adviser. But it is not true. Mr. BONNER never influenced or tried to influence this journal—he has had as little to do with its course on any question as the man in the moon. The Westminster Review, to which Mr. FIELD has sent his letter, will doubtless take proper notice of this fact. And our English contemporary probably knows quite enough of the management of the Erie Road to be aware that we have attacked it in the interests of commercial honor, which ought to be dear to men of all nations, but which Mr. FIELD's clients have recklessly trampled under foot.

What It All Comes To.

The report of the San Domingo Commission does not add very much to the information already in possession of the people, but it puts it before us afresh in an official form. The Commissioners interpreted the resolution of Congress under which they were appointed liberally. Their report is exhaustive, and all the various subjects submitted to their investigation are thoroughly discussed. The political, social, and moral condition of the people was found to be much in advance of other communities similarly situated. If the Dominicans are idle, it is because no person is sure of reaping the fruit of his labor. The fertility of the soil renders much labor unnecessary, and there is no market for the supplies which are actually raised. Dominica is pronounced "one of the most fertile regions on the face of the earth," capable of producing sufficient coffee and sugar to supply the wants of the United States. President BAEZ, far from being a usurper, is regarded even by those opposed to him as the only man "who can hold the nation against domestic faction and foreign foes." Since the return of the Commission, news has been received of the defeat of the army of CABRAL. This man, who has been called a patriot and a hero, was found by the Commissioners to be a mere insurgent leader, commanding an insignificant army, composed largely of Haytians who were armed, fed, and clothed by the Government of Hayti. LUPERON is neither more nor less than a bandit, "stained with crime," and sheltered in the territory occupied by the force of CABRAL. The Commissioners inquired as far as possible into the condition of the people on the Island of Jamaica and of the Republic of Hayti, and found the contrast to be in favor of the Dominicans. The people were almost unanimous in favor of annexation. They were thoroughly conversant with the subject, had well discussed it, and looked upon it as the only means of self-preservation.

The Spanish occupation of the island has been placed in a new and different light by the researches of the Commissioners. Spanish occupation failed by reason of violated pledges, brutal officers, outrages committed by those in authority, interference with religious beliefs, and the fear that slavery was to be re-established. As for the debt of the island, it was ascertained to be about fifteen millions of dollars, and the revenue of the Republic was $772,694. Not the slightest taint of "a job" was found connected with any of the negotiations preceding or subsequent to the treaty. The grants to individuals were made for the purpose of internal improvements, and would tend to the benefit of the whole people. The subject of annexation will probably not be further considered during the present session of Congress, and before another session is opened the people will have had time to form a deliberate judgment upon the course which ought to be pursued.

MINOR TOPICS.

TWEED'S TAX LEVY bill passed the Senate yesterday at a sign from the "Boss." The debate will be found elsewhere, and we commend Senator PARKER's speech to the attention of our readers. The bill itself is one of the greatest outrages ever attempted in a free community—but that is a matter of no moment to the Boss. He wants the money, and will have it, and there's an end of the subject, especially as the Citizens' Association fully indorses the knaves.

Mr. J. HOWARD WAINWRIGHT's sudden death, yesterday, will occasion sincere sorrow to a wide circle of friends. Mr. WAINWRIGHT was a man of most estimable character, and in his social relations he was not only much respected, but he had engaged the affections of all who were brought into contact with him. He was worthy of the father of whose name and reputation he was justly proud. Of late years Mr. WAINWRIGHT had occasionally suffered from ill-health, but there was nothing in his condition to justify apprehensions of any serious results. The immediate cause of his death was effusion of blood to the brain. He will be deeply lamented, not alone by his family, but by all who knew his worth.

The bill for enforcing the Fourteenth Amendment, known as the Shellabarger bill, including numerous amendments in several important particulars, passed the House yesterday by a vote of 118 to 91, all the Democrats voting in the negative. The bill will be found in full elsewhere. It confers power for the President to protect persons in their liberties and rights, wherever the local power of States is insufficient to do so. The bill now goes to the Senate, where it is understood some further amendment will be made. The debate in this matter is not concluded, and the session will, in all probability, be continued until at least the middle of the month.

President THIERS would do well to carry into effect his threat of attacking the southern forts of Paris. The dregs of the city population, to whom the present is a golden opportunity for indemnifying themselves for the forced submission of the period of the siege, have already begun to plunder the churches. Pillage that begins with sacerdotal possessions is not likely to end there. The lower sections of the Socialists plant a very free constructed upon PROUDHON'S great aphorism that "all property is robbery." Banks, stores and private mansions will certainly be rifled if only a little time be allowed. The decreasing squabbles of the only representatives of law vouchsafed to Paris at present, do not help to mend matters, and the rich and law-abiding citizens of the French capital will very shortly have poignant reason to bemoan their apathy to the progress of misrule, unless the hideous farce is immediately ended with national bayonets.

The bill granting State aid to the Midland and Adirondack Railroads was ordered to a third reading in the Assembly last evening. The first of these roads is a very important one for the commercial interests of this State. It will, when completed to its western terminus, tap Lakes Erie and Ontario. It opens in this State a section of country rich in agricultural and dairy products, which has heretofore been land-locked. The road is a trunk line, and will have the effect of restoring to the City of New-York much of the diverted Western trade.

Our famous Republican General Committee held a meeting, last night, at which a very general opinion was expressed adverse to the reorganization demanded by the State Committee, and by the general voice of public opinion. Mr. GREELEY offered a resolution which, while describing the order of the State Committee as an injustice and a wrong, agreed to obey it. This was voted down by 37 to 8. Gen. COURTNEY introduced a resolution instructing Mr. SUTHER on the San Domingo question, and another to the effect that it is "usurpation"—everything is usurpation nowadays—on the part of the State Committee to interfere in any way with the General Committee. No other action was to have been expected, but the State Committee is not likely to let the matter rest here.

A few days ago, Justice DOWLING said he had arrived at the conclusion, "after a long consultation with the Superintendent of Police, that in order to improve the character of the City, it would be necessary to break up the 'faro' games, as well as 'keno,' and they had commenced with the day games, as the frequenters of those places were generally persons who could ill afford to lose." We wonder if it is the intention to make war on all the gambling hells of the City, or merely upon those valuarly known as the "skin-game banks," and allow the fashionable dens on Broadway to continue undisturbed. Many attempts have been made to punish "Broadway men" under the Gambling act, but somehow it always happened that the "pinched pigeons," who were depended upon by the prosecution, were induced to withdraw on having their money refunded. The "day games" are bad enough, and ought to have been suppressed long since, but they are not so dangerous as the night games; for while the former are engaged in by the worst classes of the community, the latter dazzle the uninitiated with sumptuous suppers, foster a spirit of recklessness among the sons of the rich, and bring sorrow and desolation to homes that were once cheerful and happy. When we find Justice DOWLING and Superintendent KELSO working together for the suppression of all the gambling hells, we shall then begin to think they do really mean to "improve the character of the City."

Some of the old and best-managed savings banks are declining to put the savings of the public committed to their charge in Tammany bonds. An instance came to our knowledge a few days since, not only in confirmation of this fact, but in illustration of the pad decadence of City credit from five per cent. a year down to seven per cent. under the Tammany rule. The Croton water loans of 1839-40 were favorite investments for more than twenty odd years, although carrying only five per cent. interest. The savings bank referred to, nearly thirty years ago, bought $1,000,000 of this security at a small premium. It fell due a short time since, and the million of dollars was collected, but was reinvested in City credits bearing seven per cent. interest. The trustees of the people's savings committed to their charge very properly believed it to be the part of prudence, and of duty, to reinvest the money in United States securities, at a cost yielding scarcely five per cent. interest.

The Alice Cary Monument Fund—The Memorial Window Abandoned.

An entertainment in aid of the Alice Cary Memorial Fund, consisting of readings by Mr. F. C. HARRIOT, was given, last night, at the Church of the Strangers. Owing, perhaps, to the specially great outside attractions, the audience was quite limited in numbers. Mr. HARRIOT commenced by reading BRET HARTE's genre picture of "Tennessee's Partner;" followed it with poems by ALICE CARY, N. P. WILLIS and others, and concluded with the memorable scene of Sairey Gamp's visit to Mr. Mould, the undertaker, which was received with tokens of special appreciation. After Mr. HARRIOTT had concluded, Dr. DEEMS made some remarks which finally settled the vexed question of the Alice Cary Memorial Window. He said that ALICE CARY belonged to no sect and no church. She did not belong to the "Church of the Strangers." Those who had originated the idea of a memorial window, thought that Church a fitting place for the window, because it belonged to no sect, but was as universal in its Christianity as Miss CARY herself was. They did not assert, nor mean to imply, that she was a member of the church. When the plan of a window was proposed, no other form of memorial had been suggested. Now a monument in Green-Wood had been suggested, and had received powerful support. He did not believe that both projects could succeed, and therefore advised all who had subscribed for the window to transfer their gifts to the Committee on a Monument, if one should be appointed. All gifts which had been received for the window, as well as the proceeds of the entertainment which Mr. HARRIOT had kindly volunteered, would be devoted to that object, and the plan of a memorial window would be given up for the present.

ALBANY.

The Two Per Cent. Tax-Levy Bill Before the Senate.

Protracted Debate Upon and Final Passage of the Measure—Senator Creamer as a Humorist—Tweed's Water Bill—Miscellaneous Matters.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

ALBANY, April 6.—The Assembly this evening ordered to a third reading, by a vote of 68 to 56, the bill to arrest State aid to the Midland and Adirondack Railroads. The total amount that the two roads will be authorized to draw under the bill is about two millions of dollars. It is thought that by confining State aid to the two roads which open up commerce from the lakes to tide-water, the objections urged by the Governor in his veto of last year's bill, will be overcome. This bill received the support of most of the New-York delegation, and in part that is strongly urged by the Chamber of Commerce and by business men generally in New-York. A bill was introduced and passed the Assembly, to-night, providing for the immediate construction of the Hoosac Tunnel from 60 to 80 per head. The passage of the Two per Cent. Tax Levy is duly celebrated by the Democrats of the City of New-York. Senator PARKER, who has charge of the bill in the Senate, is expected to report it to-morrow morning. It is understood that the Democratic members of the Senate will caucus this evening upon the bill, with a view to its passage to-morrow. Should the bill be defeated, it is thought that the Democratic members will be called together in caucus, and the bill will be passed by a party vote. Senator PARKER, who is leading the opposition to the bill, is a lawyer of high standing, and is a member of the Committee of Conference on the part of the Senate. The leading opponents of the bill in the Assembly are Messrs. SWEENY, HOFFMAN, and others. It is thought that the bill will be passed by the Senate to-morrow, and will be signed by the Governor

TIMES OFFICE, APRIL 7—4:30 A. M.

FRANCE.

The Insurgents Dislodged at Neuilly.

Cannonading Going on Near Issy and Vanves.

Churches Sacked, Priests Insulted, and Jesuits Shot.

Sanguinary Retaliations Threatened by the Nationals.

THE PARIS REVOLT.

More Fighting Near Neuilly—Fierce Cannonading Between the Forts—Courts-Martial to be Organized.

VERSAILLES, April 6, via LONDON, April 7.—The insurgents have been dislodged from the bridge of Neuilly. A fierce cannonade is kept up between Chatillon and the forts of Issy and Vanves. A deputation of Parisian merchants have had a consultation with President THIERS. A bill has been introduced into the Assembly to accelerate the action of Courts-martial.

It is apparently the purpose of the Commander of the Versailles army to completely invest the capital. The lines are already established on the left bank of the Seine. Bagneux has been occupied, and it is expected that the occupation of L'Hay and Choisy-le-Roy will soon follow.

The Nationals have been ordered to retire behind the forts and remain on the defensive. BERGERET claims that the fire of the forts has dislodged the Government troops from their advanced positions. The Commune is making requisitions on the shops for arms and ammunition.

Adherents of the Versailles Government to be Arrested—Reinforcements for the Nationals.

PARIS, April 6th, via LONDON, April 7—3½ A. M.—The Commune decrees the arrest of all persons accused of complicity with Versailles, and a jury of investigation will decide who shall be detained as hostages. Every execution of a National taken prisoner, or of a civil partisan of the Commune by the Versailles officers, will be immediately followed by the execution of treble the number of hostages.

CLUSERET reports to the Commune that the reorganization of the National Guard will give them 100,000 picked men. He adds that at the present moment the policy of the patriots is to maintain an attitude of defense.

ROCHEFORT's journal is severe in its condemnation of the administration of affairs by the Commune.

The Churches and Convents Sacked and Priests Insulted.

BRUSSELS, April 5.—A nun, who escaped from Paris and arrived here today, reports that churches have been sacked, priests insulted, arrested and maltreated, and convents entered at night and searched. A rumor prevailed before she left that twenty Jesuits had been shot. M. ASSY succeeded in escaping from Paris after he had been hunted from place to place by the Communists.

Jesuits Arrested—The Versailles Government Waiting for Artillery.

LONDON, April 7—6 A. M.—Special dispatches to the Daily News report that all the officers and professors of the College of the Jesuits in Paris have been arrested by the Communists.

M. GROUSSET, appointed by the insurgents Delegate Minister of Foreign Affairs, has sent out a circular addressed to the Representatives of France abroad, notifying them of the election and organization of the Commune.

The army of Versailles is waiting for heavy artillery to attack Fort d'Issy.

The peace plenipotentiaries of France and Germany will have another meeting at Brussels on Saturday.

Stoppage of Telegraphic Communication with Paris.

LONDON, April 6—Evening.—Direct communication by telegraph with Paris has ceased, the wires having been cut by the insurgents. The city is again isolated, and all dispatches have to be sent from points outside the lines of the National Guards.

THE ELECTIONS.

Election in Connecticut of all the Republican Candidates Except the Governor.

HARTFORD, Conn., April 6.—The Evening Post of this city announces the election of the entire Republican State ticket, with the exception of the Governor. The vote in detail, as given in the large towns, shows that ENGLISH has generally run ahead of his ticket, and JEWELL behind, probably on account of the Capitol question. The Republican ticket, except the Governor, has probably more than 100 majority.

HARTFORD, April 6.—The election returns at the Courant office, which have been carefully revised and footed up, show that ENGLISH's plurality for Governor is only 17. In these returns the scattering votes are not given, but there is little doubt that there are enough of them to throw the election into the Legislature. The official canvass of the votes will not be made for two weeks. The Courant's returns also show that all the other Republican State officers are elected by the people by handsome majorities, as follows:

MORRIS TYLER, Lieutenant-Governor, by 300 majority.

HIRAM APPELMAN, Secretary of State, by 300 majority.

DAVID P. NICHOLS, Treasurer, by 800 majority.

JOSEPH W. MANNING, Controller, by 334 majority.

The complete returns show that there is a Republican majority of 35 on joint ballot in the Legislature—5 in the Senate and 21 in the House. The House stands 126 Republicans to 139 Democrats.

The Rhode Island Election.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., April 6.—The complete returns of the State election give PADELFORD, (Rep.) for Governor, 6,819; STEERE, (Dem.,) 5,945. The Senate stands 26 Republicans to 9 Democrats, and 1 no choice. The House stands 61 Republicans to 13 Democrats, and 2 no choice.

The St. Louis Municipal Election.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., April 6.—The official majority for Capt. BROWN, who was elected Mayor on Tuesday, is 2,034. The lowest majority is for DOYLE, Harbor-master, 1,559, and the highest majority is for W. C. CARR, Auditor, 2,723. The majority for F. W. MAHRER, (Democrat,) for County Treasurer, is 1,063. The proposition for the county to subscribe $1,000,000 to the St. Louis and Fort Scott Railroad, was defeated by a vote of 4,783.

THE WEATHER.

Synopsis of Observations for the Past Twenty-Four Hours.

WAR DEPARTMENT—OFFICE OF THE CHIEF SIGNAL OFFICER, WASHINGTON, April 6, 1871—7½ P. M.—The rainy and threatening weather prevailing Wednesday night on the lakes was dissipated with light rains during the night, and followed by brisk north-west winds and clearing-up weather. Clear weather, with occasional cloudiness, has prevailed today east of the Mississippi. The temperature has risen very rapidly at several points, but least so in the Eastern States. The rains on the Pacific Coast have ceased, and brisk south-west winds now prevail there, with clear weather. The pressure has fluctuated slightly over the country, with a tendency to increase in the northern half, and to diminish in the southern half.

PROBABILITIES.

There are no certain indications of any important change in the weather for to-morrow. An area of low pressure seems to be forming in the North-west.

Meteorological Observations at Mount Washington.

SUMMIT OF MOUNT WASHINGTON, N. H., April 6.—Observations at 7 o'clock P. M.: Barometer, 29.88; change plus, 0.34; thermometer, 18°; change plus, 15°; relative humidity, 0.64; wind, west; velocity, 21 miles per hour. The temperature was only 3° at 6 o'clock A. M., but has been increasing steadily during the day. The wind blew at a tremendous rate all night and this morning.

REPUBLICAN REORGANIZATION.

Adverse Action by the General Committee—The Communications of the State Committee Referred—A Resolution by Mr. Greeley Rejected.

The Republican General Committee met at the corner of Fifth-avenue and Twenty-second-street last evening, Hon. HORACE GREELEY presiding. Col. JAS. B. FAIRMAN moved to expunge Ex-Alderman DAYTON's recent resolution about Tammany Republicans from the minutes, but Mr. O. D. CONOVER and Gen. ASPINWALL opposed the motion on the ground that it had already been rejected. The motion was lost, after which the Committee went into secret session, after a very protracted debate subsequently transpired regarding resolutions about reorganization, and the San Domingo question. The report of the Republican State Committee ordering reorganization in this City, was presented and read, after which Gen. JOHN COCHRANE moved the following, which was ultimately adopted by a vote of 99 in its favor to 1 opposed:

Whereas, The State Committee have, upon charges and petitions preferred, decided to have the General Committee and the twenty-one Assembly District Associations connected therewith; and to organize another General Committee, and other District Associations in their stead; and

Whereas, The charges and petitions on which their action is avowedly based have been shown, without refutation, to be destitute of foundation in fact, and are contemptible; and

Whereas, This General Committee is, within the admission of the State Committee themselves, the regular Republican organization of the City of New-York, and has been recognized as such by the Republican Party of the State of New-York in State Conventions assembled; and the constituent Assembly District Associations are, by the same authority, the regular and only representatives of that party, and entitled to paramount control in the affairs of their respective Assembly Districts; therefore,

Resolved, That the determination of the State Committee to dissolve the regular Republican organization of the City of New-York, and to create another, without cause and without power, is an act unprecedented in its nature, without justification, incompatible with the principles and life of the Republican Party, and, if persisted in, an act of usurpation, unauthorized by either policy or necessity.

Resolved, That we, the General Committee, and the twenty-one Assembly District Associations whose delegates compose it, and through whom the Associations speak, decline, in our capacity of the regularly authenticated Republican organization of the City of New-York, to accede to the usurpation of the State Committee, or to co-operate in the same; but maintaining, in their integrity, the powers intrusted to us by our fellow-Republicans of the State, through the Republican State Convention, we intend, now and hereafter, faithfully, fairly and honestly to discharge the duties of our office.

Resolved, That the communication read from the State Committee, addressed to Hon. HORACE GREELEY, Chairman, and to Messrs. PETER COOPER, WILLIAM CURTIS NOYES and others of the Executive Committee, of which SINCLAIR TOUSEY is Chairman, with power,

Ex-Alderman DAYTON was the only member who voted against the resolution, Mr. GREELEY, Chairman, declining to vote.

Mr. GREELEY offered as a substitute to the resolution the following, which was rejected by a vote of 99 to 9:

Resolved, That this Committee believing itself the regularly and only organization of the Republicans of the City of New-York, and having no intention to yield its right in the State Committee unless expressly authorized to do so by the vote of a State Convention, will yet evince, as our predecessors have repeatedly done, our readiness to consult in any case that seems in the hope of thereby preserving and promoting the Republican cause, and we therefore consent to the reorganization proposed by the State Committee, and direct our Chairman to co-operate with the Chairman of that Committee in effecting the same.

Hon. THOMAS E. STEWART recommended that Gen. COCHRANE's resolution be referred to the Executive Committee, which was lost.

The following resolutions were offered by Gen. COCHRANE, and were referred to the Executive Committee:

Resolved, That the recent deposition by the United States Senate of CHARLES SUMNER, of Massachusetts, from Senatorial dignities, decided in the American eye, with startling distinctness, the outlines of this tragic story. It is the 10th day of May last, and the curtain rises upon a Senate Chamber and a seated Senator and a stricken New. The 10th of March, 1871, has come. Again the Senate chamber, the seated Senator, and a New. Fifteen years have passed away, and the scene is the same—nay, more, when one the deed all else unchanged, how falls the blow of slavery then beneath the blow struck by victorious vengeance now?

Resolved, That the annexation of the Republic of San Domingo to the commercial and agricultural wealth, and as a naval station, giving control over and access to the waters of the Caribbean Sea, makes its acquisition desirable to the United States. The vast area of San Domingo, its genial climate, its capacity for supplanting American civilization in a semi-barbarous island, and of maintaining it there against sectional assaults and contentious factions, and the largely increased exports which would be required, would add from $20 to $30 per capita to the wealth of the nation. It is with these views in clear opinion, that Congress should postpone the project indefinitely.

Resolved, That extend as we might the area of freedom over both sections of the American Continent, we think it has now needs protection at home more than expansion abroad.

Resolved, That we approve of the provisions of the bill introduced by Hon. REUBEN E. FENTON into the House of Representatives, to abolish or modify those of the Customs Revenue laws have failed; that the people, now burdened with heavy taxation, have a right to expect the strictest economy shall be observed by all administrative officers of the country, which it is by all admitted does not exist under which a Collector of Customs and a Surveyor of the Port of New-York may each, upon occasion, be known to receive $50,000 per year for services which demand the part of not more than $5,000 each, and would have amply compensated.

The meeting adjourned about 11 o'clock.

Meeting of the Sixth Assembly District Republicans—Address by Charles S. Spencer.

Mr. CHARLES S. SPENCER delivered an address before the Union Republicans of the Sixth Assembly District, last evening. He said that there were many persons who supposed that the Republican party was fast falling to pieces, and that in the strength of the opposition many of the Democratic leaders in Congress and elsewhere were assuming the old domineering tone. The Connecticut election had proved the falsity of this idea; never in its history had the Republican party possessed so much latent strength as at present. Men who pretended to say as FRANK BLAIR and FERNANDO WOOD did—that Gen. GRANT was trying to create a military despotism here and at the South, were either fools or knaves. He believed in the Ku-klux bill, and had he been in Congress, as he thought he ought rightly to have been, he would have voted for BEN BUTLER's original measure. In respect to San Domingo, he had always thought it to be the annexation policy school; and of he had his way, would annex Canada, Mexico and Cuba, besides that little section which was now exciting so much discussion. There were points in which the Republican Party would have to undergo a change; instead of taxing the present generation to reduce the public debt, it should be funded, and he also thought that the manufactures of the country had now been built up sufficiently to stand without protection. Though neither of these were strictly party questions, they would soon be generally accepted by the Republicans.

The meeting unanimously resolved "that the appointment of Hon. WM. A. DARLING, as Appraiser, and Ex-Congressman LAFLIN, as Naval Officer of the Port of New-York, meets with our hearty approval."

Domestic Unhappiness and Suicide—A Sad Story.

The body of a woman was found in the North River last evening at the foot of Twenty-second-street. From appearances, she had been some time in the water. She was attired in a silk dress, black seal-skin sack and fine undergarments. Her shoes were gone, but had doubtless been washed away. About her neck was a gold chain, to which was attached a gold watch, No. 18,884, made by TIFFANY, and with "E. F." on the case. She had three rings on her fingers, one a solitaire diamond, one with eleven diamond stones, and one a plain gold puzzle ring. The body was taken to the Morgue.

The body was subsequently recognized as that of EMMA FOX, the wife of the late W. W. FOX, who died about three weeks ago at the Everett House, and was buried in Westchester County. She was always regarded as eccentric. On the 11th of February she left the house in the evening, having first threatened to destroy herself in consequence of her husband's dissipation. She had left her home many times before, on account of a like cause, and had been taken charge of at the House of Mrs. MOORE. On the evening in question, when she left the house, Mrs. MOORE's son followed her, but by some mischance he lost sight of her in Eighth-avenue, near Twentieth-street, and she was never afterward seen by the family. FOX was at one time worth $100,000, and had lived at Newport, N. J., and one of the quarrels between him and his wife was about her refusal to sign a deed by which he could raise $30,000, with which to continue his dissipation. When Mrs. FOX disappeared the Police were informed, and Detectives HAMMERSMAN and SIMMONTON were employed to work up the case; but the water hid from their view all trace until the body floated lazily floating to the surface. After FOX died, personals were published in the papers to attract her attention, but of course none of them were ever answered. The sad circumstances of this painful suicide will doubtless be brought to light during the inquiry before the Coroner.

MR. BRENTANO, (No. 33 Union-square,) is first in the field with two publications which will be eagerly sought for—the Graphic and Illustrated London News—both containing pictures of special interest in relation to the recent wedding of the Princess LOUISE and the Marquis of LORNE. The Illustrated News gives double-page portraits of the young couple, a fine view of Inverary Castle, the Duke of ARGYLL's seat, sketches from the land of "Lorna," and numerous engravings of wedding presents. The present number of the Graphic is not quite so rich in marriage pictures—they are reserved for the next number. Mr. BRENTANO has also republished a review and criticism of Mr. DARWIN's Descent of Man, by ALFRED RUSSEL WALLACE—the book's author of the "Origin of Species." In selection, Mr. WALLACE's criticism will be found to repay attentive perusal, and Mr. BRENTANO has brought it out in exceedingly handsome low price. The enterprising newsvender also has French Nature, the Saturday Review, and many other foreign publications.

THE NEW-YORK TIMES.

SUNDAY EDITION.

Our Sunday edition of the 9th inst. will be replete with interesting and readable articles.

Among several attractive specially prepared for this issue will be found graphic details of an INTERVIEW WITH THE JAPANESE TROUPE at present performing in New-York. The unreserved and artless conversation of our Eastern visitors, together with their first impressions of our American civilization and their accounts of their life at home, furnish matter which is at once instructive and amusing.

Another paper will be given on THE DRESS OF OUR AMERICAN WOMEN, containing many useful hints on really artistic and becoming costume, and calling attention to the absurdities of dress and fashion which we daily see indulged in by those who ought to know better, and which we hope the influence of Brown will soon entirely neglect.

We shall endeavor to find room for one or two interesting letters from correspondents, which have lately been received.

The department of CURRENT LITERATURE will contain, as usual, a well-selected story, and numerous extracts from the freshest books and periodicals.

NOTES AND COMMENTS will be found original and varied; the weekly summary of Domestic Intelligence will completely cover the latest events of the nation and foreign shore, and the Art Criticisms will include interesting notices of the newest products of our local studios.

The special department allotted to MILITARY GOSSIP will be as comprehensive and readable as heretofore. It is conceded to be

The space devoted to miscellaneous reading matter does not impair the fullness of the latest news by mail and telegraph and the variety of the local reports contained in our Sunday edition.

As a family newspaper, the character of this paper is too well established to require any mention of the fact that all objectionable features are rigorously excluded both from its advertising and literary columns.

As a medium for advertisers, it will be found one of the most valuable and effective that any journal can afford. It circulates among the best classes of the community, and is, perhaps, more thoroughly and carefully perused than our similar publication. To insure proper classification, advertisers should send in their notices before 6 o'clock on Saturday evening.

HEAVY BURGLARY IN BOSTON.

Arrest of a Receiver in New-York—$50,000 Sold by Justice Hogan at the Tombs.

The wholesale glove warehouse of CHURCHILL, GILLRAY & CO., No. 25 Chauncey-street, Boston, Mass., was entered by burglars on the evening of Saturday, Jan. 28, some time after 6 o'clock, at which time the store was closed, and before 9 o'clock was robbed of 300 dozen of gloves, worth $3,000, and sixteen pieces of silk, worth $4,400, all of which was successfully carried off. The burglary was not discovered until the next morning, when Mr. CHURCHILL was summoned by the Police to visit the store, and there found one of his partners and two detective officers. From the nature of the burglary the Police became convinced that the work had been done by a notorious burglar named GEORGE HALL, who had been seen in Boston about that time. This HALL had been a bank-note engraver, and had been arrested for making a counterfeit plate for a bond, for which offence he was sentenced to five years' imprisonment. After coming out of prison he became connected in a fatal manner with the murder of a man named [illegible] for which he had only left prison a few months. His subsequent movements were not known, but the Police of Boston had been watching him closely, and had traced him to Oxford-place, a [illegible] in Boston, and there always lost sight of him. Here the Police suspected HALL of secreting the stolen property. They resolved to search for him in Oxford-place, and they discovered an alleyway leading to Oxford-court. No one in Oxford-place seemed to know HALL, and the officers determined to watch the Oxford-street doors. Three houses from the corner of Oxford-place in Oxford-street was the residence of Mrs. HOGAN, and to this house HALL was traced. From Mrs. HOGAN the officers learned that a man answering HALL'S description had taken rooms of her under the representation that he was a mercantile agent. He told her that he had a partner, who sometimes called occupy a room during his absence, and that might also [illegible] together. Further inquiries developed the fact that Mrs. HOGAN knew all about the burglary, having overheard the whole thing planned.

On the night of the burglary, the goods were all taken to that house, where they were unpacked, the wrappers taken off the articles, and the goods then packed in two large trunks and a valise. HALL went off with the expressman, and during his absence Mrs. HOGAN went to his room and there found the wrappers of the silk and gloves. Some of these wrappers and bands Mrs. HOGAN saved and gave to the officers. She had said nothing about the burglary before the visit of the officers, from fear that in the absence of her husband HALL might do him some harm. When HALL returned that night, after shipping the stolen goods, he cleared up the room, and then left for parts unknown, neglecting to pay his rent.

The officers next traced HALL to an intelligence house in Pleasant-street, where he was living with a woman not his wife. Here there arrested [illegible] to which he was known, and [illegible] that would lead to the recovery of the property. The Police then ascertained that the stolen goods had been taken to the Providence Depot by an expressman named RICHARD BRACKETT, and they soon had this man under arrest. At the Providence Depot they learned that PETER MAGUIRE, who was subsequently arrested in connection with the burglary, had been there on the night of the burglary. Having this clue they went to Providence and there found MAGUIRE, and in his possession discovered 150 pairs of the stolen gloves. The silk was not recovered. The Police then learned that HALL and MAGUIRE had been seen in the company of JOHN FOWLER, alias JOHN SPIERS, a well-known burglar. These three had been together at 9 o'clock on the evening of the burglary. He also was arrested, and the four, HALL, MAGUIRE, BRACKETT and FOWLER, are now awaiting trial in Boston on the charge of burglary.

Mr. CHURCHILL, during the present week, was called to this City to purchase some goods, and Mr. EDSON BRIDGMAN, of No. 76 Franklin-street, informed Mr. CHURCHILL that he had sold gloves in November last, paid him a visit. Mr. BRIDGMAN had purchased, through commission merchants, on Tuesday last, fifty-seven dozen pairs of gloves, and his salesman had recognized some of these gloves as similar to those he had sold to Mr. CHURCHILL in November. Mr. CHURCHILL on examining them, saw at once that they were a part of the stock stolen from him in January, and the matter was placed in the hands of Detective FIELD, who traced the goods through different hands to RUDOLPH LUTTGENS, of Hoboken, who said they had been intrusted to him to sell on commission, and that the man who gave him the original bill was held by Justice HOGAN, at the Tombs, to answer the charge of receiving stolen goods.

SOUTHERN LEGISLATION.

Full Text of Mr. Shellabarger's Substitute Bill—A Comprehensive Scheme of Legislation for Southern Outrages.

The substitute for the Kuklux bill reported to the House yesterday by Mr. SHELLABARGER, is as follows:

SECTION 1. Be it enacted, &c., That any person who, under color of any law, statute, ordinance, regulation, custom or usage of any State, shall subject any person in any State, Territory or District of the United States to the deprivation of any rights, privileges or immunities secured by the Constitution of the United States, shall, any such law, statute, ordinance, regulation, custom or usage notwithstanding, be liable to the party injured in any action at law, suit in equity or other proper proceeding for redress. Such proceeding to be prosecuted in the several District or Circuit Courts of the United States, with and subject to the same rights of appeal, writs of error and other remedies, provided in like cases in such Courts under the provisions of the act of the 9th of April, 1866, entitled "An Act to protect all persons in the United States in their civil rights, and to furnish the means of their vindication," and the several acts amendatory thereof, and which said laws of the United States are in their nature applicable in such cases.

SEC. 2. That if two or more persons within any State or Territory of the United States shall conspire together to overthrow, or to put down, or to destroy by force the Government of the United States, or to levy war against the United States, or to oppose by force the authority of the Government of the United States, or by force, intimidation, or threat to prevent, hinder or delay the execution of any law of the United States, or by force to seize, take or possess any property of the United States against the will and contrary to the authority of the United States, or by force, intimidation, or threat to prevent any person from accepting or holding any office of trust or place of confidence under the United States, or by force, intimidation or threat to impede, hinder, or by force, intimidation or threat to prevent any officer of the United States to leave any State, district, or place where his duties as such officer might lawfully be performed, or to injure him in his person or property on account of his lawful discharge of duty of his office, or by force, intimidation, or threat to delay any witness in any Court of the United States from attending such Court, or to injure such witness in his person or property on account of such attendance, or by force, intimidation or threat to deter any witness, juror or officer of any Court of the United States from discharging his duty, or to injure such witness, juror or officer in his person or property on account of any verdict lawfully assented to by him, or to conspire together for the purpose, either directly or indirectly, of depriving any person, or any class of persons, of the equal protection of the laws, or of equal privileges or immunities under the laws, or for the purpose of preventing or hindering the constituted authorities of any State from giving or securing to all persons within such State the equal protection of the laws, or to injure any person or his property for lawfully enforcing the right of any person or class of persons to the equal protection of the laws, or to injure any person or his property for giving support or advocacy in a lawful manner to the lawful enforcement of said rights, each and every person so offending shall be deemed guilty of a high crime, and upon conviction thereof in any District or Circuit Court of the United States having jurisdiction thereof, or Districts or Supreme Court of any Territory of the United States having jurisdiction thereof, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $5,000 nor more than $10,000, or by imprisonment with or without hard labor, as the Court may determine, for a period of not less than six months nor more than six years, as the Court may determine, or by both said fine and imprisonment, as the Court shall determine; and if any one or more persons engaged in any conspiracy such as is described in the first preceding section, shall do or cause to be done any act in furtherance of the object of such conspiracy, whereby any person shall be injured in his person or property or deprived of having and exercising any right or privilege of a citizen of the United States, the person so injured or deprived of such rights and privileges may have and maintain an action for the recovery of damages occasioned by such injuring or depriving of person of rights and privileges against any one or more of the persons engaged in such conspiracy, such action to be prosecuted in the proper District or Circuit Court of the United States with such rights of appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States as are given in cases of like character by the said act of April 9, 1866, and the remedies provided in said act, and the said Courts under the provisions of the act of April 9, 1866, and of this Act, are hereby invested with full and complete jurisdiction to protect all persons in the United States in the rights, and to furnish the means for their vindication.

SEC. 3. That all or any of the persons where insurrection, domestic violence, unlawful combinations or conspiracies in the State shall, any of them, oppose or obstruct or hinder the execution within such State of any of the laws of the United States, or shall, any of them, so oppose, obstruct or hinder the execution of the laws of the United States as to deprive any portion or class of the people of such State of any of the rights, privileges or immunities named in and secured by this act, and the constituted authorities of such State are unable to protect, or are unable to, or shall from any cause, fail in or refuse protection of the people in such rights, such facts shall be deemed a denial by such State of the equal protection of the laws to which they are entitled under the fourteenth article of the amendments to the Constitution of the United States; and in all such cases it shall be lawful for the President, and it shall be his duty to take such measures, by the employment of the militia or the land and naval forces of the United States, or of either, or by any other means that may be deemed necessary for the suppression of such insurrection, domestic violence, or combinations, and any person who shall be arrested under the provisions of this and the preceding section, shall be delivered to the Marshal of the proper district to be dealt with according to law.

Provided, that the President of the United States be, and he is hereby authorized, in his judgment it shall be deemed expedient, to direct voluntary enlistments of any of the militia of the United States, in lieu of all or any part of the force herein authorized to be employed for the purposes aforesaid, for a term of service not exceeding thirty days after the final adjournment of the next session of Congress.

SEC. 4. That whenever in any State, or part of a State, the unlawful combinations named in the preceding section of this act shall be organized and armed and so numerous and powerful as to be able by force to either overthrow, or put at defiance the constituted authorities of such State, or when the constituted authorities are in complicity with, or shall connive at, the unlawful purposes of such powerful and armed combinations; and whenever, by reason of either or all of the causes aforesaid, the conviction of such offenders and the preservation of the public safety shall become in such district impracticable, in the judgment of the President, the said district shall be deemed a rebellion against the Government of the United States, and during the continuance of such rebellion and within the limits of the district which shall be so proclaimed by the President, martial rule may be established.

SEC. 5. That nothing herein contained shall be construed to supersede or repeal any former act or law except so far as the same may be inconsistent herewith, and any offenses heretofore committed against the laws of any former act shall be prosecuted, and any proceeding already commenced for the prosecution of such offenses, or for the punishment of the same, in this act had not been passed, except so far as the provisions of this act may go to sustain and validate such proceedings.

The above programme will be repeated in the afternoon, beginning at 3½ o'clock.

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

Business at the Exchange yesterday (April 6) was dull after the excitement of the previous days, the attendance light and the absence of anything in that spirit which has of late characterized it. A large part of the real estate [illegible] was withdrawn, and such as was sold brought hardly average figures. The following is a review of the transactions:

HOUSTON, WILKINS & Co., at public auction, sold, the premises known as No. 74 Seventh-avenue, southwest corner of Seventh-street, embracing a four-story high-stoop brick house, (with brown-stone trimmings, and lot, the latter in size 22 by 100.5. MARKS ROTHSCHILD purchased the property for $24,450. The same firm sold the lot of 20.5 by 100 of up-town building property, situated, respectively on Sixty-seventh, Sixty-eighth and Sixty-ninth streets, near Eleventh-avenue, and One Hundred and Twentieth and One Hundred and Twenty-first streets, near to Riverside-avenue. The prices and locations of the several purchasers are given in detail in the report of sales below. The sale was for cash, and the title is made to settle certain interests, and all the property except those bought by Mr. LEHMAIER, which is paid, purchased by or for the parties having a share in the realty. The result of the sale was, therefore, one fixing a valuation, rather than determining the real value of the lots sold. As an administrator's sale Mr. MULLER also sold a leasehold property in Brooklyn, on Henry, near Middagh-street, consisting of two brick houses and a lot 40 by 80 for $7,000. Purchaser, Wm. A. COLLIER. No other sales were effected.

The following real estate was offered yesterday at the Exchange, and subsequently withdrawn, the bids, where any were made, being deemed inadequate:

By MULLER, WILKINS & Co., two four-story brick houses, with stores and lots—the latter 20 by 80—on the north-west corner of Second-avenue and Eighty-fifth-street, and four other similar houses and lots in the same block, on the west side of the avenue, near Eighty-fifth-street. For one of the houses $23,000 was offered, but not taken. Two-story frame house and lot, No. 160 One Hundred and Twenty-sixth-street, south side, between Third and Fourth avenues, nominally, was sold for $6,100 to H. FINCKE, for the owner. Four full-sized lots on the south side of Sixty-ninth-street, 200 feet west of Eleventh-avenue, and three full lots on the east side of Eleventh-avenue, 25 feet south of Sixty-fifth-street. No bids.

By E. H. LUDLOW & Co., three-story and basement high-stoop brown-stone house and lot, No. 40 East Forty-seventh-street, north-east corner Fifth-avenue; size of lot 20 feet front, $18,500 bid, $20,000 asked. Also, a two-story and basement brick house and lot, the latter 19 by 107.2, in Brooklyn, known as No. 314 High-street, south side, between Gold-street and Hudson-avenue; $6,300 bid, $8,000 asked. No further business was transacted.

In Brooklyn, yesterday, at the Commercial Exchange, under the direction of J. COLE, auctioneer, several sales at public auction were effected, with but, however, indifferent results. Property on the north-east corner of Hudson-avenue and York-street, on Gold-street, near Walker, on Eighth-avenue, near Degraw-street, and on Sackett-street, near Richmond-avenue, was disposed of. Also, at a Supreme Court sale, in foreclosure, under the direction of G. R. STEPHENS, Esq., referee, property on Tompkins-avenue, near Hart-street. The last-named piece of real estate, as the amount of the lien was not bid, was purchased by the Equitable Insurance Company, the owner of the mortgage foreclosed and plaintiff in the suit in question; four-story brick stores and lots on Fulton-street, between High and Nassau streets, known as Nos. 171, 177, 179 and 181, respectively, and two lots, each 25 by 110, on the north side of Bergen-street, between Grand and Washington avenues, all advertised to be sold, were withdrawn for the want of bids. Few persons were in attendance at the sale-room, and but little interest was manifested. For particulars in regard to the property sold reference is made to the summary appended:

The only sale noticed for to-day is one by order of the Sheriff at the Exchange in this City; auctioneers, ROBERTS & MCGUIRE; property, five-story brick tenement, southwest corner of No. 59 Ridge-street. The sale is not a positive one, being subject to adjournment, and as the day is Good Friday, probably but little business will be transacted.

The auction sale of houses and lots at Hudson City, advertised to be sold on the premises on Tuesday next by A. D. BELLICK, JR. & CO., did not take place, as anticipated, but was again adjourned until the 11th inst.

WANTED BY E. S. BAILEY, No. 65 Wall-st.

OFFICE OF THE OHIO AND MISSISSIPPI RAILWAY COMPANY, No. 32 WALL-ST.,
NEW-YORK, March 24, 1871.
THE OHIO AND MISSISSIPPI RAILWAY COMPANY having decided to change the gauge of their road from six feet to four feet, eight and a half inches, and also to make it conform to the gauge of its numerous connecting and intersecting lines, have, for the purpose of making said change, and providing the necessary rolling stock, and for other corporate wants and purposes of the Company, executed a new mortgage for four millions of dollars, covering all the property and franchises of the Company, to be denominated Second Consolidated and Sinking Fund Mortgage.
The present mortgage debt of the Company is $6,000,000, or about $17,600 per mile on 393 miles of road owned and operated by the Company, and connecting Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Louisville and St. Louis. The total mortgage debt, including the new issue of four millions, will be $10,000,000, or about $27,200 per mile.
The new bonds are for one thousand dollars each, with coupons attached, the principal payable in forty years, with interest at seven per cent. per annum, free of United States income tax, payable semi-annually in New-York, on the first days of April and October next. The payment of said interest is secured by a sinking fund commencing with twenty thousand dollars per annum, and so graduated and regulated as to take up the whole amount of bonds before their maturity. They will entitle the holder to vote, and may be registered.
The Company now offer for sale two millions five hundred thousand dollars ($2,500,000) as follows: Proposals for the same (in amounts not less than five thousand dollars) will be received at this office until 2 o'clock P. M. of the 10th day of April next, specifying amount and price offered. The money to be payable in five installments of twenty per cent. each, as follows: first installment on acceptance of bid, and the others on the first days of May, July, September and October, 1871. It being understood that in all cases, the interest which has accrued upon the bonds at dates of payment shall be paid by the purchaser, in addition to the price bid.
Proposals to be addressed to the undersigned, and marked: "Proposal for Second Consolidated Mortgage and Sinking Fund Bonds."
ALLAN CAMPBELL,
Chairman Executive and Finance Committee.

WASHINGTON.

Bill for the Suppression of the Ku-klux Passed in the House.

Adoption of an Important Amendment—A Strict Party Vote—The Same Subject Before the Senate—Shellabarger to be Congratulated by the Colored Men —Butler and Davis.

WASHINGTON, April 6.—The House has finished and passed a Southern-outrage Repression bill, and adjourned until next Monday. The final vote stood—yeas 118, nays 91, with only eighteen absentees, on a total of 229 Members. The vote was strictly a party one, every Republican's objections having been met by modifications which really strengthened the bill. The general debate closed at 2½ o'clock today, when a vote was taken on Mr. FARNSWORTH'S amendment to strike out the proviso known as BUTLER'S section, providing for the calling-out of the volunteer militia of any State, which is known to have been copied from the law of Congress of 1795, which empowered President WASHINGTON to put down the whisky insurrection in Pennsylvania. The vote on this was—yeas 113, nays 87, about twenty Republicans voting with the Democrats to strike out. Mr. SHELLABARGER then moved the previous question, which was sustained without a division, when Mr. SHELLABARGER rose to close debate, which he did in an hour's speech, not devoted to an argument of the questions involved in the bill, for he had covered that ground before, but to a compact, powerful and eloquent vindication of the Republican Party, with a correspondingly severe arraignment of their opponents. His closing tribute to the work accomplished by the Republican Party was eloquently poetical, and as he sat down he was warmly applauded. It will probably prove the greatest campaign speech yet made. The next vote was on Judge ARDLEY'S amendment, striking out that portion of the fourth section which authorizes the President to suspend the writ of habeas corpus under certain circumstances. Twelve Republicans voted with the Democrats in favor of striking out, and when the roll-call was complete it stood yeas 109, nays 100, when five of the Republicans who had voted yea changed to nay on the information that Gen. GARFIELD'S amendment, next in order, would so modify that as to make it unobjectionable. The vote, when announced, therefore, showed that on the motion to strike out, the yeas were 109 and the nays were 104. This enraged the Democrats, and ELDRIDGE immediately came to the front in the rôle of filibuster, but he was promptly put down by the Speaker who held the House to the agreement of Monday that there were to be no dilatory motions, a decision which the House sustained informally, and in which the Democrats generally acquiesced. Gen. GARFIELD'S amendment, which regulates the suspension of the habeas corpus by the provisions of the second section of the act of 1863, was then agreed to on a division. Mr. HALE'S amendment, in the shape of an additional section, providing for the purging of juries, in cases under this act of Ku-klux sympathizers and conspirators, and at the same time repealing the iron-clad oath for all other jurors in United States Courts, was agreed to, the Democrats voting for it en masse, as something gained. Mr. HOLMAN'S amendment striking out the third section was then negatived, whereupon Mr. BINGHAM declared himself satisfied with the bill, and withdrew his substitute, and the bill as amended passed; yeas 118, nays 91. Never has a bill been more thoroughly or ably debated, and, as a consequence, the measure has been vastly improved, and the sentiment of the House on this subject, which was almost chaotic when the debate began, is now well defined and quite thoroughly disciplined. There now seems a reasonable prospect that Congress may adjourn in about ten days.

CONGRATULATIONS OF COLORED MEN.

The colored men from the South at present sojourning in the city are so much gratified at the result of Judge SHELLABARGER'S efforts in the passage of a Ku-klux Suppression bill, and particularly with his powerful speech of today, that they propose to congratulate him formally to-morrow. He will therefore receive them in the Speaker's room to-morrow at noon, when an address of thanks and congratulation will be made by Rev. SELLA MARTIN, to which Mr. SHELLABARGER will reply.

DISCUSSION IN THE SENATE.

The Ku-klux question was discussed in the Senate today in able speeches by two Republicans, who defended and upheld the reconstruction measures of Congress, FRELINGHUYSEN and PRATT. Both speeches were able and well delivered, but the Senate was thin and the galleries deserted. The debate awakens little interest, and there is a general desire manifested to discontinue it as soon as may be. The House bill passed today is expected to reach the Senate the first thing to-morrow morning, and it will doubtless be read the first time, and lay on the table till the next day for a second reading. The Democrats might, under the rules, compel this any way, but it will not be necessary for them to objects since Mr. MORRILL, of Vermont, by unanimous consent, holds the floor immediately after the morning hour for his San Domingo speech of three hours and more; besides, after Mr. PRATT'S speech, today, the amendment to the concurrent resolution was postponed, and the case of BLODGETT and GOLDTHWAITE made the unfinished business after MORRILL closes. The House bill will not probably be referred, which the Democrats desire, and if it is, it is understood to be the intention of the members of the Judiciary Committee to report it back at once, so that no delay would be accomplished. The Judiciary Committee have had no meeting to prepare a bill, as instructed by the resolution passed yesterday, and will not prepare one, but leave the House bill unembarrassed by any competitor. The order of considering the House bill, the appointment of an investigating committee, and the election cases which STEWART threatens to press, will be decided by vote of the Senate, but action on the House bill is likely to be had first, and if so a vote will be brought about one of the first days of next week by an all night session, if not otherwise. It is quite likely that no amendment will be made, the clause authorizing the suspension of the habeas corpus being more strongly favored in the Senate, it is believed, than in the House. At any rate the amendment will be unimportant, and such as the House will readily agree to. The House amendment to the Senate resolution for an Investigating Committee will not be agreed to by the latter body, there is reason to think.

CASE OF GOLDTHWAITE AND BLODGETT.

It is the general belief that the resolution permitting FOSTER BLODGETT and GOLDTHWAITE to take seats in the Senate on the prima-facie evidence of their credentials will not be acted on at this session.

BEN BUTLER AND GARRETT DAVIS.

Mr. GARRETT DAVIS, who objects to being called venerable, perhaps because he is not venerated, after composing his nerves for several days from the shock they sustained when Gen. BUTLER "cast a sly glance" at him, became sufficiently confirmed today to make an attack on BUTLER, in which, as might be supposed, there was a great deal of meanness and no humor. He made a personal explanation, having first had read an extract from the New-York Herald, giving an account of his "late unpleasantness" with BUTLER, and an extract from the speech of the latter gentleman in the House two days since, in which he, DAVIS, received a smart rap. The reading being finished, he told a plain, unvarnished tale, containing his version of the scene between himself and BUTLER. He related an old story of his about BUTLER'S having stolen the silver plate of a man named BROTHER at New-Orleans, and ended by calling Gen. BUTLER by a variety of hard names. This harangue, so offensive as he intended it should be against parliamentary law, he reserved till on the point of sitting down, so as to be sure of finishing before he could be called to order, and the last part of it was but faintly heard above the prompt and sharp rapping of the Vice-President. Only a few Senators were in their seats, and the galleries were nearly empty, but those who heard the delivery of this premeditated meanness were confirmed in the belief that the opinion of Gen. BUTLER concerning the old man was as true as could be pronounced.

FORTY-SECOND CONGRESS.

FIRST SESSION.

SENATE.—WASHINGTON, Thursday, April 6.

THE EFFECT OF BUTLER'S EYE.

Mr. DAVIS, of Kentucky, obtaining leave to make a personal explanation, sent to the desk and had read by the Clerk an extract from the New-York Herald's correspondence of Friday last, purporting to give an account of the scene in the Senate on the previous day between himself and Representative B. F. BUTLER. The extract, commencing with the expression attributed to DAVIS, was then read.

Mr. DAVIS, resuming.—Mr. President, I should not call that extract to be read if it did not bear intrinsic evidence that it is upon the authority of BUTLER himself. I now ask the Clerk to read an extract from a speech to be found in the Globe of yesterday.

The following, taken from BUTLER'S speech, delivered in the House on Tuesday last, was then read by the Clerk:

"Does Ku-klux banditti exist in Kentucky, that dark, bloody ground, where the savage and brutal passions of man never yet have found restraint either by time, place or circumstances, civilization or education, so that neither the piety of years, nor the gray hairs, give protection, the solemnity of place or occasion awe, then inasmuch that their ruthaught and untamed outbursts may break forth even in the Senate Chamber of the United States; their impotent rage exhibiting itself in the whining and puling accent of an imbecile and unhonored old age."

Mr. DAVIS then stated to the Senate that several years since—during the war—a gentleman, named BROTHER, came to Washington from St. Louis, and stated that he owned a house in New-Orleans, which he had left some months previously for the purpose of sojourning in St. Louis during the hot months, as was his habit; that before leaving home he placed his service of silver-plate, worth about $4,000 in the vault-safe of a merchant friend for security, and had locked up in his house all his other furniture, which had cost him some $20,000; that after Gen. BUTLER was appointed to the military command at New-Orleans, he heard about this plate, and, therefore, sent a military order to demand the delivery over to him, which the party holding it declined to obey. Upon this, BUTLER sent a die of soldiers with workmen and the necessary implements, who forcibly opened the vault, and carried off the plate. He then sent an armed force to Mr. BROTHER'S house, and had them cart away all that gentleman's furniture. Mr. BROTHER made application to President LINCOLN for an order upon BUTLER for the surrender of the property, and Senator HENDERSON and Representative ROLLINS, of Missouri, went with Mr. BROTHER to the President and indorsed his high character and his loyalty to the Government, but the President declined to interfere. He (Mr. DAVIS) then moved a resolution in the Senate for the appointment of a select committee to investigate the complaint of Mr. BROTHER. The Senate voted it down. At the ensuing session he introduced it again, when the majority again rejected it. On both occasions he stated to the Senate the facts as recounted by Mr. BROTHER, as the foundation for the resolution.

Mr. DAVIS continued as follows: A few days after, having moved this resolution a second time, I received a discourteous note from Gen. BUTLER, and thereupon I pronounced in the Senate that he was a military blunderer, and that his cowardice and incompetence as a commander had brought shame and dishonor upon his country; its Government and arms at Big Bethel, New-Orleans and Wilmington. I never exchanged a word with Gen. BUTLER, and such were our relations up to the time of the scene in this Chamber between him and myself; and I will make a plain statement of what then occurred. I was making some remarks on the resolution in relation to alleged outrageous in the Southern States, and was about bringing them to a close when I happened to turn my face toward Senator THURMAN'S seat, which is immediately to my right. I saw that his chair, about four feet from me, was occupied by Gen. BUTLER, but until then had not been conscious of his presence. He was looking at me steadily, and there was an ominous scowl upon his brow. Both his gaze, proximity and his manner were offensive, and I addressed my closing words to him by manner and action. I then took my seat. He continued to maintain an earnest and excited look, whereupon I turned my seat and faced him, and when we had looked each other in the eye for an instant, I said to him, "You d—d old scoundrel, are you here to scowl at and browbeat me?" [Laughter on the Republican side.] He made no reply, and I repeated that language. He then responded, "I have not addressed you, Sir, or said a word to you." I then said, "What are you here for?" WHY did you scowl at me?" he answered; "I did not scowl at you; you are an old man." I rose to my feet and advanced one step toward him, and said: "I am young enough to go with you from this Senate Chamber whenever it is your pleasure." At this point Senator WILSON stepped between us, laid his hand on BUTLER'S shoulder, said a few words to him, and they walked off together. Mr. President, my only purpose has been to state this affair as it took place, and thus correct misrepresentation. I have given it as it took place between BUTLER and myself, and all of them. It was not my intention to bring before the Senate any controversy with the universally-recognized blackguard, coward and scoundrel of the United States, who himself does not dissent from the general judgment against him.

[The latter portion of this sentence was scarcely audible, in consequence of the Vice-President rapping vigorously with his gavel, and declaring the Senator from Kentucky to be out of order.]

The Vice-President stated that he was not in the chair at the time of the occurrence referred to, but it was due to the Senator who did occupy the chair at the time, to state that the words spoken of in the public prints, and to some extent corroborated by the Senator from Kentucky, were not sufficiently audible to be heard by the Chair.

Mr. DAVIS.—That is true.

The Vice-President added that undoubtedly the Senator who occupied the chair at the time, would have arrested the proceeding if they had been heard by him.

CASE OF GOLDTHWAITE AND BLODGETT.

The Senate then proceeded to discuss the resolution, reported from the Committee on Privileges and Elections, admitting to seats Messrs. GOLDTHWAITE, of Alabama, and BLODGETT, of Georgia.

Upon a point raised by Mr. THURMAN, the Vice-President decided that the question could be taken separately upon each case.

After an argument by Mr. THURMAN in behalf of the validity of GOLDTHWAITE'S claim, and to show that BLODGETT'S election was spurious, the subject was laid aside, and the Senate took up the concurrent resolution for a joint special investigating committee upon the South.

INVESTIGATION OF SOUTHERN DISORDERS.

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN then addressed the Senate at length, eulogizing the reconstruction policy of Congress as most wise and benedicent, and insisted that a more just and clemency without a parallel. The Government, at the end of the war, could, by right, have confiscated the entire property of the rebels and bestowed it all upon the former slaves, who were its friends, and by whose unrequited toil that property had been amassed. Discussing the recent constitutional amendments, in the light of their true meaning and proper construction, he held that the heresy of State rights had been completely buried by those amendments; that, as amended, the Constitution confers not only national, but State citizenship, born or naturalized within our limits; that the citizen mechanic of Massachusetts could pursue his trade in the streets of Charleston, and, if necessary, call upon the whole power of the Government to protect him. Therefore it was time that the cry of "carpet-bagger," "adventurer" and "scalawag" should cease. In a general argument on the right of Congress under the Fourteenth Amendment to establish a criminal code in all the States for the protection of the citizen and repression of lawlessness, he remarked that he took the precise line that Senator HARLAN, of Iowa, had pursued in yesterday's debate. He held that the practical refusal of the State authorities to secure the equal protection of the laws to black and white alike, devolved upon Congress that duty, and would justify coercive legislation of general application. The plan which had been proposed of levying damages upon localities in which Ku-klux outrages were committed, would, he thought, prove efficient.

At 4 o'clock the Senate went into Executive Session, and soon after adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Mr. DAWES presented the petition of the American Board of Commissioners of Foreign Missions for compensation for property appropriated during the war.

PUBLIC LAND AND WATER IN CALIFORNIA.

Mr. KENDALL, of Nevada, offered a resolution instructing the Committee on the Judiciary, when appointed, to inquire what legislation is necessary to prevent damage to public lands of the United States by the diversion of the waters of Lake Tahoe, by a corporation organized under the laws of the State of California. The preamble to the resolution sets forth that the corporation is now making surveys for the avowed object of diverting and drawing off the waters of the lake so as to supply the City of San Francisco and intermediate places with water for domestic and irrigating purposes at prices to be fixed by the corporation; that the United States have not parted with their title to the lake or the lands adjoining the same; and that such diversion would render valueless and practically prevent the sale or occupation of a large area of public land which could be irrigated and rendered available by the natural flow of the waters from the lake.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS IN BROOKLYN.

Mr. KINSELLA introduced a bill providing for the erection of a building capable for the use as a post-office, United States Courts and for the accommodation of internal revenue offices and other Government purposes in Brooklyn, N. Y. Referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

THE ENFORCEMENT BILL.

Mr. SHELLABARGER, of Ohio, said that he should at 2½ o'clock today ask the House to second the demand for the previous question without cutting off amendments.

Mr. DAWES, of Massachusetts, suggested that after the vote today the House adjourn until Monday next.

Mr. WOOD, of New-York, asked what was the object of the adjournment? Why not proceed with the consideration of the Deficiency bill?

Mr. DAWES replied that he supposed the House, after sending the pending bill to the Senate, would not have anything to do except pass on the Deficiency bill.

Mr. HAY, of Illinois, hoped there would be no final adjournment until the House shall have acted on the Apportionment bill, introduced by Mr. MERCUR, so that the Western States might have their increase of representation.

Mr. WOOD supposed that all the gentlemen were anxious to adjourn the session at the earliest practicable time. He assumed there were but two measures which the majority of both Houses desired to be acted upon; first, the pending bill, and, second, the Deficiency Appropriation bill. He therefore suggested that the Deficiency bill be taken up directly after the pending bill shall be voted on.

Mr. HAY remarked that Mr. DAWES had said the Deficiency bill could just as well be laid on the table as not.

Mr. SHELLABARGER repeated he should ask the House to pass on the previous question at 2½ o'clock.

Messrs. SNYDER and EDWARDS, of Arkansas, made brief speeches in favor of the proposed legislation.

Mr. MORAN, of Pennsylvania, expressed his views in favor of the objects sought to be accomplished by the pending bill to enforce the provisions of the fourteenth article of the Constitution.

Mr. ELDRIDGE, of Wisconsin, did not doubt that outrages had been committed on the rights of the people, not only in the South but in the North. He did not, however, believe that the disturbances in the South were such as had been described; certainly none that warranted the passage of this extraordinary measure. The people everywhere were crying for peace, but he conscientiously believed that this bill was a declaration of war.

Mr. KERR, of Vermont, stated his objection to the bill as originally introduced. The first section in effect abolished the criminal jurisdiction of the States, transferring it to the Federal Courts. He believed, however, that all the rights conferred by the Fourteenth Amendment can be enforced by the United States.

Mr. YOUNG, of Georgia, said that during his absence from Washington he found peace and quiet among the people, but on his return he realized a contrary feeling in Congress. The excitement was all here. Looking over the South, it was discovered that nine-tenths of the clamor about outrages was false, and raised for base political and radical purposes.

Mr. PERCE, of Mississippi, in response to Mr. YOUNG, said that his views were hunted down in that State like dogs for their political opinions. As Gov. ALCORN'S telegrams had been quoted, he (Mr. PERCE) caused to be read an extract from the Governor's Message to the Legislature, suggesting measures for the detection and punishment of the midnight assassins commonly known as Ku-klux.

Mr. BINGHAM, of Illinois, said he wanted to go to the extreme limit and verge of constitutional power to suppress the existing disorders and to punish the offenders.

Mr. HANDLEY, of Alabama, caused to be read a letter from a citizen of Alabama, now in New-York, addressed to him, in which the writer says the best thing that could be done was to let Alabama alone and free to develop her resources, and urging the removal of all political disabilities.

Mr. DE LARGE, (colored,) of South Carolina, said he represented a district in which there had been no outrages since the reconstruction. He was free to admit that both parties were responsible for the present disturbed condition of affairs in South Carolina. He was thoroughly convinced that some legislaton was necessary, but this would not be sufficient unless his Republican friends removed political disabilities, for they could not expect those now resting under them to exert themselves to preserve the public peace when they have nothing to hope for in the future.

Mr. FARNSWORTH moved to strike out the proviso authorizing the President to direct voluntary enlistments of any of the militia of the United States in lieu of all or any part of the force authorized to be employed. He objected to enlarging the regular army, which the bill would do.

Mr. POLAND, of Vermont, said he believed that if any State denied the equal protection of the law, or if a State passed laws to protect every citizen in the right guaranteed by the Constitution, and any person or persons interfered to prevent such equal protection, then they had a right to make the latter set an offense against the United States.

The House agreed to the motion of Mr. FARNSWORTH, that striking out the proviso above referred to—yeas 113, nays 87.

Various amendments were offered, when Mr. SHELLABARGER moved the previous question, which was seconded and the main question was ordered to be put.

Mr. SHELLABARGER then proceeded to close the debate. He said it was a fact that there were bands of conspirators in one-third of the States; that, yesterday, organized, unpunishable; their number was unknown perhaps three hundred thousand, and their victims enumerated by thousands. The other fact was, these conspirators were in the interest and service of the Democratic Party. These two averments were made on one side while they were totally denied on the other. Putting the statement in another way, the dual allegation was, that in the South one-half of the people undertook to overthrow the rights of the other half, and to this end were making satisfactory progress under cover of the night, masked, by ravaging, burning and murder. And while these things were rife in the South, gentlemen of the North were engaged in denying or palisating the crime of violence against human rights and civil and religious liberty. On the other side, this allegation was denied. He should not enter into the evidence to show that such illegal combinations exist and such crimes are committed. We had only to glance at the ghastly array of witnesses, and this would explode doubt as to the conspiracy, and the immense number of victims, to say nothing of the designs of the conspirators, further than that they are to overthrow the equality of the law for the enfranchised race. In all cases of murder and violence, the attacking party belonged to one party, and the victims to the other. This conspiracy was incipient rebellion. He then proceeded to argue that the Democrats in their last National Convention, declared in favor of the overturning of the reconstruction acts, having nominated for the Vice-Presidency the author of the proscriptive letter. The author of that letter was now a leader of their party in the Senate, holding that all the new amendments to the Constitution were inoperative, never having been adopted. Two million seven hundred and two thousand democrats in this country voted for the platform and candidate. The conspirators of the South were working in the same direction for the overthrow of all the rights conferred on the enfranchised race, and the destruction of all the laws made for their protection. He consumed his hour in showing the necessity for the passage of the bill.

Mr. COX, of New-York, wished to offer a substitute for the bill proposing general amnesty, an act of grace against this act of force. He wanted a square vote on it.

He did no obtain unanimous consent to offer it.

Mr. AMBLER, of Ohio, moved to strike out from the bill the power given to the President of the United States when, in his judgment the public safety requires it, to suspend the privileges of the writ of habeas corpus, to the end that such rebellion may be overthrown, &c. The amendment was disagreed to—yeas 101, nays 105.

YEAS—Messrs. Acker, Adams, Ambler, Archer, Arthur, Beck, Bell, Briggs, Bingham, Bird, Braxton, Bright, Brooks of New-York, Burchard, Caldwell, Campbell, Carroll, Cessna, Cox, Crebs, Critcher, Crossland, Davis, Dox, Du Bose, Duke, Edwards, Eldridge, Ely, Farnsworth, Finkelnburg, Forker, Foster, Garrett, Getz, Golladay, Griffith, Hale, Handley, Harper, Harris of Virginia, Hanford, Hibbard, Holman, Kerr, King, Kinsella, Lamison, Leach, Lewis, Manson, Marshall, McClelland, McCormick, McCullough, McIntyre, McKenney, McNeely, Mercur, Benjamin F. Mr. HOLMAN, of Indiana, who, as he said, had changed his vote from the affirmative to the negative, for the purpose of moving a reconsideration, now did so.

The Speaker declined to recognize the gentleman from Indiana to make the motion to reconsider, but awarded the floor to the gentleman from Massachusetts, (BUTLER), who voted with the last majority, in order that he might move a reconsideration, in order that he might move to lay the motion to reconsider on the table. The Chair would recognize no dilatory motions, so that would be failure to the last movement. Mr. BUTLER then said he would withdraw the motion, which the Democrats, with the agreement was made that they would waive no fights.

After further conversation, Mr. KELDRIDGE moved that when the House adjourned today, it be till Monday next.

Mr. HOLMAN moved to strike out the third section of the bill, which was disagreed to.

Several amendments were then made to the bill, when it was passed under the operation of the previous question—yeas 118, nays 91, as follows:

[The bill as originally presented by Mr. SHELLABARGER may be found on second page.]

Applause followed the announcement of the passage of the bill from the Republican side.

The Speaker reminded gentlemen that that was a bad example to set to the galleries.

The House, at 6½, adjourned till Monday next.

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

NEW-YORK.

Mr. J. HOWARD WAINWRIGHT, a prominent member of the New-York Stock Exchange, died very suddenly, yesterday morning, at his own home in this City. He was in Wall-street Wednesday afternoon, apparently in fair health. He arose yesterday morning at his usual hour, and was last seen alive at 8 o'clock, reading the morning paper in his back parlor. Breakfast being announced, he was found stretched upon the floor dead. The cause of death is pronounced to be effusion of the brain. Mr. WAINWRIGHT was about forty-five years of age, and was the son of the lamented Bishop WAINWRIGHT, of this City.

The funeral of the late ANDREW R. JACKMAN, Ex-Coroner, took place yesterday, at 1½ P. M., from his late home, No. 310 East Third-street. The remains were inclosed in a handsome rose-wood casket, heavily mounted in silver. A large number of friends of the family attended the funeral, and the following named persons acted as pall-bearers: Andrews Mills, Christian Metter, Samuel S. Acker, Robert Earl, James R. Steers, John Mason, Benjamin F. Rhodes and John D. Murdock. The body was conveyed to Calvary Cemetery, where the funeral services were performed, and the remains deposited in the family vault.

Yesterday morning five persons were locked up in the prisoners' box at Essex Market awaiting the arrival of Justice LEDWITH, who was detained, and when one of the officers opened the cell, a few minutes after 11 o'clock, he was surprised to find but two instead of five occupants. An investigation revealed the fact that a wooden partition in the rear of the bar had been broken down, and that three prisoners had passed through the aperture into the cellar, and thence made their escape. One was a youth named FOX, charged with stealing a bundle of lath.

The interesting course of lectures that Dr. LORD has been delivering before the Young Men's Christian Association will terminate this evening, when "Daniel Webster" will be the theme of discussion. The success which has attended the doctor's lectures this Winter is a deserved compliment to his ability in the lecture-field, and it is to be hoped that he will give a more extensive course of evening lectures next Winter, so that our business men can avail themselves of the benefit.

In the matter of the bankruptcy petition of JOHN R. PENN, of the firm of CULVER, PENN & Co., for himself and against his partners, in which the question of jurisdiction was raised at the trial of the cause before Judge BLATCHFORD, in the United States Court in the recent term, a decision was rendered yesterday, directing that the objection to the jurisdiction of the Court be overruled, and that "the case stand for hearing on the other specifications."

A young couple appeared before Judge SPENCER, in the Superior Court, yesterday, told him that they had not been long married, and that they wanted to be divorced. They had no charges to make against each other, and the only ground on which they sought the annulment of the marriage contract was that they had mutually agreed that it was best. The Judge explained the law to them, and they departed wiser and sadder than they came.

JOSEPH S. HURD was brought up, yesterday, before Commissioner DAVENPORT, charged with perjury and attempted black-mailing. Commissioner WILLIAMS testified to the evidence given before him by the principals in the prosecution he commenced against STERNEMANN for illicit distillation, and which, it is alleged, was willfully false. The case is adjourned for further testimony.

There will be no session of the Gold or Stock Boards today, nor of the Cotton Exchange, the members observing Good Friday. The Produce Exchange will be open, but the attendance will probably be limited. As the day is pretty thoroughly observed in England, it is expected that the quotations of the London and Liverpool markets will be rather measure.

Yesterday, JOHN BERRYMAN, of No. 120 East Eighty-sixth-street, was arrested in Broadway, for driving before a four-in-hand a pair of horses, one of which had two large galls under the collar, and one on each breast, and the other had a sore three inches square on the right breast. BERRYMAN was going down-town to commence carting flour. Justice HOGAN committed the prisoner.

At Jefferson Market Police Court, yesterday, before Judge SHANDLEY, JAMES CUSICK, the proprietor of a Keno gambling-house, was committed for trial at the Court of General Sessions, on a charge of assaulting SAMUEL CONEY, conductor on the Eighth-avenue Railroad, while in a state of intoxication the previous evening, and presenting a revolver at his breast.

Yesterday afternoon officer HICKEY observed a man named ALEXANDER MCCULLOUGH jump into the North River, at the foot of Forty-sixth-street. The officer rescued him and took him to the Yorkville Police Court, when Justice BILNY sent him to the Tombs to be examined as to his sanity.

In the case of HEINS vs. MAYER, tried before Judge SUTHERLAND, in Part II. of the Supreme Court, and reported in yesterday's TIMES, the jury returned a verdict for plaintiff for $4,098 06, being the full amount claimed.

Citizens are now allowed to land at Governor's Island by Sergeant GUERRIN'S new ferry-boat, the Governor's Island, without exhibiting passes, which until lately were issued at Army Head-quarters in Houston-street.

J. NELSON LUCKY was held for examination in $2,000 bail, yesterday, by Commissioner DAVENPORT, for defrauding THOMAS KELLY, a discharged soldier, out of $100 bounty.

BROOKLYN.

Yesterday a fine span of gray horses attached to a carriage was seen dashing along Flushing-avenue, in the vicinity of Prospect Park. They had taken fright, and the coachman having left his seat for a few moments, the reins were loose, and away went the team at tremendous speed. Mr. YOUNG, of BERGH'S Society, was on the road, and springing at the horses' heads, hung on to them for about a hundred yards, and eventually they stopped. Two ladies were in the carriage and were much frightened.

ANNIE OLMSTEAD, about fourteen years of age, residing in North Fourth-street, near Sixth-street, E. D., left her home on Monday last, and has not been seen since. A letter, however, was received by her parents yesterday, signed by her, and stating that she intended to drown herself, but without assigning any reason for so doing. The Police have the matter in hand. The belief is that the girl has been induced to go to some den in New-York, and has written the letter in question for the purpose of deceiving her parents.

A lecture and festival for the benefit of the Howard Orphan Asylum will be given to night in the Bridge-street M. E. Church, (col-

WATCHES.

And we submit the following reasons why they should be preferred to any other American Watches:

In the first place, the Waltham Company is the oldest, and had had the experience of any others engaged in the business in the United States.

In the second place, the machinery in use by the Waltham Company is far more perfect and varied, and as a result the Watches are of far higher grade and of greater variety, and are placed in the market at much lower prices than any others, quality and style fully considered.

In the third place, the Waltham Watch is not a staple article, the reputation fully established, and, as a consequence, it is sold at less profit than any others in the market.
